From the Editors

IT WAS THE most unlikely television hit of recent years. The 2021 South Korean drama Squid Game about a game show where the outcome for everyone who took part – bar the winner – was death. Put like that, it seems bleak, but Netflix's hit tapped into our post-pandemic imagination by touching on our deepest fears.

The 456 contestants were chosen because they'd fallen on hard times, and the prize of 4.56 billion KRW was the dream of untold riches. The fact that their fate rested on the whims of a malevolent taskmaster made it all seem more capricious. The green tracksuits and masks added a surreal touch of which Wes Anderson would be proud. The show, like its success, was extraordinary.

Now Netflix has decided to take Squid Game to the next level of strangeness by turning a drama about a game show into a reality show itself. Made by Studio Lambert, the company that makes Gogglebox, Squid Game: the Challenge sees 456 real people playing Squid Game for fun. No one dies, you will be relieved to hear. Although when we say fun, that's a relative term, because $4.56 million is on the line for the winner. The jeopardy in that sense is very real.

In this issue Mark Lawson, who was given a rare preview of the show, talks to the makers of Squid Game: the Challenge and explores some of the problems they faced. As the man behind the programme, Stephen Lambert, says, "To have a hugely successful drama that includes a game that could be played for real gave an almost unique opportunity for crossover. Although it throws up a lot of problems to play it for real." Find out how Lambert resolved those difficulties in our feature on page 12. Has Netflix broken the fourth wall or jumped the shark? Tune in on 22 November and you can decide.

PODCAST

Slightly Foxed

A gently paced, bookish podcast that revels in poring over the works of authors long gone from the bestsellers lists, such as Jean Rhys, Barbara Pym and Patrick Leigh Fermor.

EIGHTH WONDER

It's not just main Tardises that get a nod – these supports have only appeared once, in 1996's Doctor Who TV movie, as part of eighth Doctor Paul McGann's console room. "It's a great distillation of everything you remember from different Doctors, looks and eras," says Tales of the Tardis producer Scott Handcock.

TARDIS CONSOLES

Multiple eras of Tardis interiors are spilling from the walls, from 60s-style to Matt Smith's first console from 2010 and beyond. "There's bits of the Peter Davison console in there," says writer Pete McTighe, "bits of the Eccleston/Tennant console. There's bits of the Jodie Whittaker Tardis. There's even bits of the [future Doctor] Ncuti Gatwa Tardis in there."

WHAT A DOLL

A box of dolls of the 11th Doctor Matt Smith – made by Karen Gillan's Amy Pond in a 2010 episode – are just one of many old props that are moved in and out of the set depending on the episode.

CRYSTAL CAMPFIRE

Every episode of Tales of the Tardis is a kind of "campfire story" – and the fire the Doctors and companions sit round is a small model of 13th Doctor Jodie Whittaker's 2018–22 Tardis set. "It's a great little device," says Pete McTighe. "It's cute."

BEHIND THE SCENES OF DOCTOR WHO

THE ULTIMATE TARDIS

In Tales of the Tardis on BBC iPlayer, Doctor Who stars revisit old adventures with the power of time travel to mark the show's 60th anniversary. It's not just a clip show; there are brand-new scenes filmed in a recently built Tardis, constructed from original and re-created props from Who history.

"It's a mashup of loads of different Tardis sets," Pete McTighe – who wrote two episodes of the Tales – tells RT on a visit to the set in Cardiff. "If you look closely in the background, there's loads and loads of little Easter eggs that are relevant to the stories that we're seeing, but also plenty of other stories as well."

"It was like a lumber room with loads of stuff that you put in – and then later you pick up things and remember," adds seventh Doctor Sylvester McCoy, who returns to revisit 1989 story The Curse of Fenric with co-star Sophie Aldred, who plays companion

Ace. "It's chaotic. But fascinating good fun."

The "Remembered Tardis", created by designer Phil Sims, was also re-dressed for every episode. McTighe insisted that key props from the McCoy years were included in the background of his episode, while other stories starring fifth and six Doctors Peter Davison and Colin Baker had their own character-specific callbacks.

"For The Curse of Fenric I specified the chess set, which is crucial in the story," McTighe says. "Also in Sylvester's I made sure we had a kite from [1988 story] The Greatest Show in the Galaxy... Ace's baseball bat from Remembrance of the Daleks, you have to have that... and Sylvester's brolly, obviously!"

We've picked out some favourite old props and sets, but how many more can you spot? HUW FULLERTON

Tales of the Tardis is available now on BBC iPlayer

ROOF ROTOR

"My console was upside down, on the roof. So that was kind of strange," says Sylvester McCoy. But the inverted time rotor still works – in the finished episode of Tales of the Tardis, McCoy uses his umbrella to work the buttons.

DOCTOR WHO 60

IN THE ROUND

The Tardis's iconic "roundel" decorations are taken from all eras of the show, from the early Doctors right up to Jodie Whittaker's hexagon-shaped versions.

GRAPEVINE

BACK FROM THE DEAD

Time loop drama The Lazarus Project is the first of Giri/Haji writer Joe Barton's shows to get a second series, and he reveals it "ends with a blatant ask for a third series". Star Caroline Quentin confesses: "I don't like science fiction!" Drawn in instead by the show's cast, characters, humour and "small, domestic moral choices", Quentin says her only disappointment in the action-filled drama is that "I still don't get to roll over the front of a car..."

KITH AND KIN

Look out for Game of Thrones alumni Aidan Gillen and Ciarán Hinds in Kin, an eight-part Irish gangland thriller coming to BBC1 soon. The drama pits local crime family the Kinsellas against global cartel the Cunninghams in a David and Goliath blood feud.

WHO DO YOU THINK WHO ARE?

Having brought back Doctor Who in 2005, and now back at the helm of the sci-fi show, while in the meantime penning Channel 4's landmark Aids drama It's a Sin, Russell T Davies is a fitting subject for the latest run of BBC1 arts strand Imagine. Also featuring in the new series will be two enduring duos: French and Saunders and the Pet Shop Boys.

TEN QUESTIONS WITH

VERNON KAY

The new boy at Radio 2 on the pressure of taking over from Ken Bruce and his marathon challenge for charity...

With 6.9 million listeners, Vernon Kay hosts the UK's biggest radio show, so he could be forgiven for putting his feet up when the faders go down. Instead, the 49-year-old is embarking on a gruelling Ultra Ultramarathon challenge for this year's Children in Need. Over four days, he'll be taking on a series of marathons and ultramarathons to get from Victoria Park in Leicester to Bolton Wanderers' stadium in his beloved home town.

Did you volunteer for this torture or did the BBC make you do it?

I think it's a case of "New boy in the building? Off you go!" Scott Mills did [a challenge] last year. Rylan, Claudia, Dermot and Zoe have all done one [some for Comic Relief]. Originally we were going to pedal from Bolton to London in pedalos. Imagine going down the canals in a flamingo, a teacup... It would've been hilarious, but might not have plucked the heartstrings and got people to donate. So instead they're throwing me over the Kinder Scout in Derbyshire. I was in the cross-country team at school, then got to sixth form, discovered discos and the odd pint, and it all went out the window. I haven't run regularly since, but I've enjoyed getting back into it.

What's your training diet?

Nothing after 7pm. My Achilles heel was crisps and the odd Wagon Wheel or Penguin of an evening. Now if I'm snacking, it's nuts, carrot sticks with hummus, something boring like that. No booze either – I haven't had a drink for five weeks. My times are coming down and the waistline is slowly diminishing, so it seems to be working. Mind you, I could murder a Galaxy and a bag of salt-and-vinegar Walkers.

Do you have all the running gear?

I've got about 20 pairs of trainers, because you have to break them all in. I'm embarrassed to say I go out in a running vest. I've got a hi-vis top, circulation socks, a bobble hat with a torch on it, flashing ankle bracelets. It's terrible! And I've got an ice bath in the garden. You've got to grit your teeth but it's only three minutes of pain. I get back sweaty from a run, jump in, then get a dressing gown on and scarper into the house. It gets the circulation going and it's really beneficial. I'm embracing all the madness. My old injuries from playing American football have raised their weary heads, but a sports therapist is massaging my aches and war wounds away.

'I was in the cross-country team at school – then I discovered discos'

MR AND MRS
Vernon with his wife, Strictly co-presenter Tess Daly

RADIO HA HA
Kay with fellow
Radio 2 presenter,
Zoe Ball

Why did you want to fundraise for Children in Need in particular?

It's a charity that everyone knows and is passionate about. My wife Tess [Daly] hosted it from 2008-19, so it's huge in our house. We've got a few kids who it's helped joining us on the run. It'll be great to tell their stories and bring home to the audience why we're doing this. The world is a tough place at the moment; helping the person next to you takes the pressure off.

Talking of pressure, how did it feel to take over from Ken Bruce, who had 8.2 million listeners?

There was a dip when Ken Bruce left but that's to be expected. Ken's a radio icon and there's a lot of love for him. That's proven by him taking some of the audience with him to Greatest Hits, which is fabulous for him. But since that dip, figures have stayed steady, so I'm pleased. It feels like I'm chatting to a load of mates. When the fader's down, it's me on my Jack Jones. When it's up, 6.9 million people from all over the UK and Europe cram into the studio. That's mind-blowing – but you can't take it too seriously.

Have you spoken to Ken since taking over the show?

We take the same train every morning! He gets on a few stops further down the line but we bump into each other all the time – we say hello and have a chinwag. Ken did 31 years in the mid-morning slot but in 31 years, I'll be 80. There's no way I'll be sat at this desk! It's a precious slot that needs the utmost respect. It's not about me or Ken, it's about the listener.

Would you fancy swapping jobs with Tess? She hosts the radio show and you present Strictly?

I think that's a great idea. We should do it for Comic Relief!

Who should win Strictly this year?

Ellie Leach is terrific and I love watching Krishnan Guru-Murthy, but it's got to be Bobby Brazier. He's like a cross between Harry Styles and Mick Jagger. Handsome fella! I'm thrilled for him and his dad, Jeff. He's done a brilliant job with the boys and should be proud as Punch. And Layton Williams is brilliant. Years ago, when he was a teenager, we did ballet together on The Paul O'Grady Show. He learnt it all from me, obviously!

Do you really brush your teeth four times a day?

Yep. I brush when I wake up, I brush after the show – because everyone remembers that schoolteacher who leant over you with coffee breath! I brush after lunch and before bed.

What awaits you in Bolton when you finish the challenge?

Zoe Ball's team, because the aim is to finish on her breakfast show. My mum and dad live five minutes away, so it would be a bit rude if they didn't turn up, frankly. I'll head straight to their place for a kip, a brew and a sandwich, then go to the pub. That's the plan! A few pints while literally pouring a tube of Pringles into my mouth.

WHAT IT'S LIKE...

Beyond Utopia, a documentary about the oppressive North Korean regime by director Madeleine Gavin (pictured below), won the Audience Award at this year's Sundance Film Festival. Now it's hotly tipped for an Oscar nod – but as Gavin explains, it's not an easy road...

DO THE RESEARCH I wanted to make a film about an escape from North Korea, so I spent months online. I found hidden-camera footage that North Koreans were risking their lives to shoot.

TAKE TIME TO BUILD TRUST Pastor Seungeun Kim [who helps North Koreans flee Kim Jong Un's regime] has turned down many film-makers. I spent months getting to know him. We had the same conviction – to make a film that focused on North Korean voices. We followed the escape of the Roh family, knowing that if they got to safety, they'd have every right to say we couldn't use the footage they filmed on their mobiles. I never imagined we'd get what we did.

GOING FOR A GONG

The audience reaction to the film started this, but we have an amazing team of executives who support our awards run. We were just nominated for four Critics' Choice Documentary Awards, I didn't even know we were up for that! It is gruelling – when I have a bunch of interviews in a row, I can't remember if I said something to you or to someone else – but it's an honour.

GET IT OUT THERE It's been a hard year for documentaries, especially getting films out to a wider audience. There should be specific venues to screen them. We should have support on the streaming side as well.

REAL PEOPLE, REAL LIVES

Pastor Kim and [defector] Soyeon Lee have been in the US with us for the last two months, helping on the awards campaign. Soyeon is advocating for her son [who was captured trying to escape].

WATCHING IS WINNING

It would be beyond comprehension to win an Oscar. But being on this path is allowing more people to see the film – that's the most meaningful thing. Beyond Utopia is dedicated to the 26 million people inside North Korea. We have to advocate for them, because they can't do it for themselves. LAURA RUTKOWSKI

Beyond Utopia is in UK cinemas now

KILL CURRENT AFFAIRS?

70 years since Panorama launched, social media means we have to change, says editor Karen Wightman

THERE IS A wonderful clip in the BBC film archive of then Panorama presenter Richard Dimpleby leading a team meeting in the 1960s. It's an all-male affair, with one producer actually smoking a pipe – something that would end with a fire alarm or a visit from security today. But something Dimpleby once said has stuck in my mind: “Panorama is called the window on the world”.

Panorama celebrates its 70th anniversary this month. On 11 November 1953 the curtain went up on the BBC's brand-new current affairs show. In the seven decades since, we have explored complex stories, pursued the truth, brought injustice to light, and held power to account.

In my 14 years with Panorama, two films stand out among many. Our investigation into the abuse of patients with learning disabilities and autism at Winterbourne View hospital near Bristol led to its closure and the conviction of 11 people. And our report on Brook House immigration detention centre resulted in a public inquiry and a recommendation that the law be changed to limit detention in such centres to 28 days.

Panorama isn't the only show in town. Channel 4's recent Dispatches investigation into Russell Brand, in collaboration with The Times and The Sunday Times, is an example of why investigative journalism matters. And BBC2's Predator: The Secret Scandal of J-Pop, about Japanese pop mogul Johnny Kitagawa, sparked a long-overdue debate about sexual abuse in that country.

But the world has changed a lot in the past 70 years. We are no longer in the age of television dominance, where everyone watches a limited number of terrestrial channels at the same time.

A DIGITAL SHAKE-UP HAS transformed not only how people consume news, current affairs, drama and entertainment, but what content they want to watch and from where. It has heralded an era of strong opinions, expressed quickly on social media. Long-form investigative current affairs, which requires significant investment of time, money and expertise, is not as commonplace as it once was.

So, can programmes like Panorama remain relevant in the age of TikTok and Instagram?

I believe we can, but current affairs must adapt to new ways audiences want to watch, listen or read. We are doing it already. Recent TikTok cuts from our investigations into teenage vaping and ballet schools have reached a new generation, bringing younger audiences back to our long-form content, not replacing it.

The rise of social media and long-form audio means we share our journalism in new formats as well. We collaborated with our podcast teams on investigations such as I'm Not a Monster and The Abercrombie Guys and we now regularly deliver Panoramas to iPlayer at 6am ahead of our evening broadcast on BBC1, bringing our investigations to a wider audience and making them available for a longer time. Our recent film about Lucy Letby attracted an iPlayer audience of more than one million in the month following its TV broadcast – bringing the total viewing figures to around 3.5m.

Seventy years on, we are still giving our audience a window on the world – a world that is changing fast. In the last few weeks, we have reported on the spectacular collapse of a cryptocurrency empire and on conflict in the Middle East. In all these films we have gone beyond the headlines to give our audience the bigger picture. Whether playing out on primetime BBC1 or iPlayer, or in bursts on TikTok, Panorama investigations have the power to shine a light into the very darkest and forgotten corners of our world. And that matters. Possibly now more than ever.

Karen Wightman is the editor of Panorama. The next edition is on Monday 8pm BBC1 and iPlayer

Co-founder of the Goons Michael Bentine was looking rather glum considering his sketch show It's a Square World was back for a new series. It ran for seven over four years, and won both a Bafta and a prize at the Montreux awards festival. Continuing the tradition of Goonish unorthodoxy, Bentine announced to everyone present at a recording session,

"To you, this may look like chaos. To the professional – it's a shambles!"

Painting a picture of the show's HQ at TV Centre, RT wrote, "The scene inside during conferences can, perhaps, be imagined, but the sounds defy description. The long-suffering occupants of the adjoining room have hung on their door a despairing sign: 'It's a Loud World.'"

LET THE GAMES

BY MARK LAWSON

TV EXECUTIVES ARE PAID a lot of money to anticipate what viewers want, but the audience can be wildly unpredictable. Seeming certainties flop while, alternatively, the Korean drama Squid Game, mainly intended by Netflix to build subscriptions in East Asia, became the streamer's biggest international hit in its 16 years. The nine-parter – in which the poor are lured to play lethal versions of children's games, risking death for wealth – was viewed in 142 million households (many containing several viewers), accumulating 1.65 billion viewing hours in the first 28 days from its release in September 2021.

Such success inevitably means a second series is in production, though the sequel is complicated by all but one of the 456 original main characters – the competitors in the game – having been killed in season one. More unexpectedly, Netflix has commissioned Squid Game: the Challenge, a reality contest in which people from around the world play the games from the drama – a bizarre generic crossover.

"It's a very unusual project," acknowledges Stephen Lambert, whose Studio Lambert was hired by the streamer to produce it, owing to a reality TV track record including Gogglebox, The Circle and, most recently, last year's BBC1 Bafta-winning success The Traitors. "But to have a hugely successful drama that includes a game that could be played for real gave an almost unique opportunity for crossover. Although it throws up a lot of problems to play it for real."

That reality, for obvious moral and legal reasons, couldn't extend to the lethal outcome in the original fiction of games such as Red Light, Green Light, a more brutal musical chairs, in which people have to stop moving when a giant doll stops singing and turns around, or be machine-gunned to death.

"There was general agreement at the beginning that it wouldn't be a good idea to kill contestants," smiles Lambert. More seriously, the producers also thought hard (in the context of frequent US school massacres and wars in Ukraine and the Middle East) about how to depict the "shooting" of the losers. "The decision was made that on the squibs the players wear that explode when they are eliminated, the liquid should not be red, but black." Squid ink, not blood? "Yes. It's never gory."

APART FROM THE elimination of the players now being metaphorical, the spin-off is remarkably similar to the original. "We assumed at the beginning that they couldn't possibly expect us to cast 456 players," says Lambert, "but they were absolutely clear that they did."

BEGIN

South Korean drama Squid Game was a global hit – now it's the biggest reality show in TV history with a $4.56m prize...

SURPRISES IN STORE
Competitors react to the fresh tests set in Squid Game: the Challenge

'We agreed it wouldn't be a good idea to kill contestants'

He says that Netflix was also "clear that they wanted a large number of North Americans because, in their terms, the show really has to work there, but the series was a global phenomenon so it had to be a global opportunity in the casting." There are contestants from every continent. Lambert was also pleasantly surprised that the streamer "absolutely insisted the prize money would be $4.56 million", the equivalent of $10,000 per player.

This makes Squid Game: the Challenge the biggest game show in TV history, with the largest single prize. "The fact that the prize is so big is the solution of how you adapt a drama that is all about being shot when you can't shoot them," says Lambert. "The prize is life-changing. So, when you are eliminated, the dreams that came from entering just die. And the fear of that happening drives how the contestants play the game and interact with each other."

Certainly, minus the death penalty, it will feel as if they are playing for real. On four soundstages in Barking, east London, the producers re-created the vast dormitories and gymnasias in which the original played out.

Toni Ireland, an executive producer at Studio Lambert, says that visual accuracy was crucial: "We were gifted this incredible, instantly recognisable world – of the sets and guards in jumpsuits and masks – that we could then put real people into, in an immersive experience as close to the drama as it could be."

JOHN HAY, CEO of The Garden, co-producers with Lambert's team, recalls that, when Squid Game creator Hwang Dong-hyuk visited the set, "the first thing he said was: 'Oh my goodness, you've had to build it all for real?' He could do a lot of it in CGI and green screen. We had to build the entire world. And the look on the players' faces when they walk into that dorm >

◁ that they've seen on TV, it just puts them in a different space from the standard house reality show."

The players and most of the viewers of the spin-off will have almost certainly seen the original Squid Game, which means that some games from the fiction will be expected – even demanded – but, across ten episodes, there must also be tension and surprise.

"One of our executives said it should be like going to a gig by your favourite band," recalls Hay. "If they don't play the hits, you'll be disappointed; if they don't play any new material, you'll be disappointed. Toying with viewer expectations gives us a new level to play with."

AN EXAMPLE OF this occurs when the contestants, asked to arrange themselves into teams for the next task, assume, from the sequence in the drama, that they will be playing "tug of war", and so maximise bodyweight in the squads, only to find that they are playing three-dimensional Warships, a game created for this version in which intellectual heavyweights would have been more useful.

While the initial challenge was creating a format so extensive and expensive, another came when filming was over and the editing had to make sense of 456 separate characters.

"The obvious difference is that Hwang Dong-hyuk knew who his main characters were and so focused on their stories," says Lambert. "We had no idea who they would be and, every time we thought we'd found one, they were eliminated."

'Netflix is giving away $4.56m so it has to be absolutely fair'

"It's a nightmare in terms of the filming," agrees Hay. "All we could do really was to track all the players and then go back in the edit when we had a clear sense of who came through to the final stages and then weave them in. It was an astonishing logistical challenge."

"We tried to get some footage of every player every day," adds Ireland. "But we deliberately focus on some people who get eliminated early so you can't assume that just because they're interviewed early on they will get through."

Watching early episodes, I was drawn to Leann, a retired newspaper executive, and Bryton, a young college athlete, who form a surprising alliance, but I have no idea how far they'll prosper.

"There were many moments when we were gnashing our teeth at the people who had gone," admits Hay, "because they were great characters." Some cynics have suggested that the producers must surely have influence over who stays or goes, but Lambert emphatically rejects that: "It's not manipulated in any way. Netflix is giving away $4.56 million so it clearly has to be an absolutely fair competition. A chief adjudicator had to approve every elimination."

"The adjudicators," adds Hay, "were qualified lawyers, completely independent of us, checking everything. It has to be beyond reproach."

SOME EJECTED CONTESTANTS have used X (formerly Twitter) to complain about health-and-safety procedures, complaining especially that the Red Light, Green Light sequence was filmed in very cold temperatures that caused distress to some.

That initial elimination round, Lambert explains, was filmed in a former aircraft hangar at Cardington in Bedfordshire, which is so big ("the largest indoor space in Europe") that it cannot be heated: "It was a very cold day and all the players were told it would be very cold and given everything possible to mitigate against that. A few people who were eliminated and had spent the day standing in the cold took to social media to complain."

Ironically, other duty-of-care rules prolonged the exposure, as each elimination from the rotating doll had to be cleared by the lawyers: "What was five minutes on screen took very much longer. But it was much better than the conditions on Survivor."

For me, Squid Game: the Challenge works – like the earlier (but not later) series of Big Brother – as a genuine experiment with human nature that could be used on psychology courses and for corporate training.

"That's the greatest compliment anyone could pay it," says Hay. "And certainly, our intention was to go a level deeper than reality TV has. The world that Hwang Dong-hyuk created in the drama was an amazing mechanism for testing character. And character placed under pressure is what unites successful drama and successful reality TV."

"With this and The Traitors," says Ireland, "I think there's a trend towards a strong game format rather than dating or house-sharing. As with The Traitors, we wanted real people, with real life experience, not someone seeking an Instagram deal."

VIEWERS MAY FANTASISE about a celebrity version. The moment when Piers Morgan or Jeremy Clarkson is eliminated on the first head-turn of Red Light, Green Light would clearly be rewarding.

"We have thought about it," says Lambert. "But are there 456 celebrities?" By now, there may be that many from reality TV alone in the 23 years since Big Brother? "I suppose there are. This is obviously not a cheap show. But, if the viewing numbers are big enough, it would clearly make sense to do it again in some form."

THE GAMES THEY PLAY

Fans will want to see their favourite challenges, but the production team have developed their own ideas, too...

THE GENIUS GAME

coming soon to ITV1/ITVX

Based on a cult South Korean game show, this tests the players' analytical reasoning, attention to detail, memory and loyalty. Much as in The Traitors and Squid Game, participants must form alliances and choose whom to trust or betray to be crowned "the Genius" and walk away with a cash prize.

LOVE LIKE A K-DRAMA coming to Netflix from 28 November

This reality dating series brings together eight Korean and Japanese actors, who live together and pair up to audition for the lead roles in six Korean mini-dramas. With romantic lines and kissing scenes, will they fall in love along the way, or are they just doing their job?

BATTLE IN THE BOX

coming soon to Dave

Jimmy Carr (below) hosts this series based on a hit Korean format, where two pairs of celebrities and comedians spend 24 hours in a giant empty box with nothing but a toothbrush. The duos are divided by a moveable wall and earn furniture and amenities by winning physical and mental challenges, while the losing team are forced into an even smaller space. LR

In the original drama series, many of the sets were generated using CGI and green screen.

The challenge for Squid Game: the Challenge's production designer Mathieu Weekes and games designer Ben Norman was to build real sets that had never before existed, and also, Weekes explains, "capture the sheer feeling of scale and space and make it as immersive as possible for the contestants".

Fans can expect to see most of the defining games from the original, but as Norman explains: "There were concerns that a lot of the contestants would overanalyse every single game in the drama, and would know what's up next and have a game plan. So we put a few extra games in to change it up and level the playing field slightly. None of them knew what was coming."

RED LIGHT, GREEN LIGHT

Players are eliminated if they're caught moving when a gigantic doll swivels her head around and stops singing. "I had to find the biggest 3D printer in the UK to get the body parts built," says Norman of the three-month job to create the fully functional, 4.2m-tall doll.

The system that tracks 456 individual players' every movement for every round from as far as 120 metres away was created by an AI company and involves multiple sensors. "As it was an AI system, it did actually start to learn human movements to make sure it caught people," says Norman.

DALGONA CANDY CHALLENGE

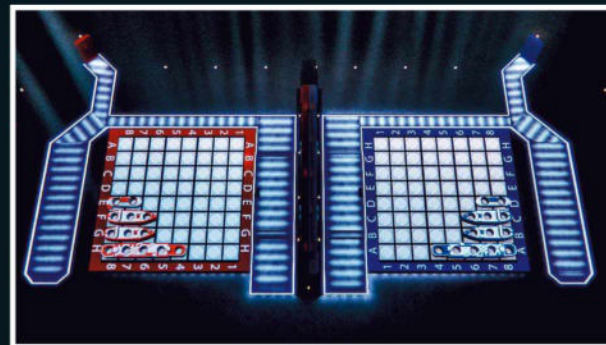

This game takes place on a gigantic playground filled with sand. "It needed to be a practical space so it could be adjudicated from a gameplay point of view, and not too cramped, while still retaining the really well-known look of the drama," says Weekes.

It's fascinating to observe the players use knowledge gleaned from watching the Korean show – such as licking the honeycomb toffee treat to release the outlined shape without breaking the rest – to attain success.

PRECISION WORK

Under pressure in the Dalgona Candy Challenge and (right) the Glass Bridge game

WARSHIPS

After thinking of hundreds of popular childhood games, they put Warships (above) into the competition. "We had a lot of input from Netflix. There was a bit of cross-checking that we hadn't randomly picked a game idea that would be in series two of the real drama," says Norman. "We kept that childish, basic feel of moulded plastic game pieces with the tiny ships, but then made it human-sized."

SQUID GAME

In the final eponymous game in the drama, there is a fight to the death between the remaining two players, but Norman says that the end game here is "obviously different and top secret". And like all of the games, it was run through by external testers who had never seen it before, to iron out the gameplay.

The commitment to keeping Squid Game: the Challenge as authentic to the drama as possible extends beyond the backdrops and games – the crew were rarely allowed into the players' space on set. If they had to do so, they were required to wear a guard's costume.

One day, Weekes had to put on the "really hot and uncomfortable" red boiler suit and mask. "I got a sense of how intense the atmosphere was in the dorm. The contestants were really standoffish – we took quite a lot of abuse, a few heckles. They saw the guards as the enemy."

Sounds like they were exactly what he and Norman wanted them to be – fully immersed in the Squid Game universe they had created for them. LAURA RUTKOWSKI

The first five episodes are released on Netflix on Wednesday 22 November, with four more on 29 November and the finale to follow

HEALING AFTER THE

Lorraine Kelly was one of the first on the scene when a jumbo jet was blown out of the air over Lockerbie in 1988. Now she returns...

THIRTY-FIVE YEARS AGO, ON 21 December 1988, sheer hell rained down on the small town of Lockerbie in the south-west of Scotland when a bomb ripped apart Pan Am flight 103. The plane, named Clipper Maid of the Seas, was mostly filled with passengers heading to the US in time for Christmas, looking forward to happy reunions with their families, their luggage full of presents.

The bomb was timed by the terrorists to explode over the Atlantic Ocean as the plane headed to New York, but the flight was delayed at Heathrow. So the small Borders town and its surrounding farmlands were turned into a war zone, strewn with dead bodies, craters and infernos, reeking of burnt corpses and aviation fuel.

I was working as Scotland correspondent for the breakfast station TV-am. We received a call from the local police that a plane had gone down. They thought at first it was a crash involving RAF jets, but as we drew nearer it was clear this was a disaster on a scale unimaginable.

The main road south was peppered with large shards of hot, green metal that punctured our tyres. After fixing them, we drove into the outskirts of the town, and saw the cockpit of the plane that had broken off and plunged into a field. It was still warm.

There were no mobile phones or internet back then, but we had responded so quickly that the police hadn't had time to put up barriers. Looking back, as we trudged through that field, I realise I was only able to function and do my job because it felt so utterly unreal. It was like the set of a disaster movie.

'I was only able to do my job because it felt so utterly unreal'

It was bad enough just to be reporting on this atrocity, but of course my experience was nothing compared with those in the town, and the bereaved all over the world. I wanted to return to make this documentary after 35 years because I always believed people in Lockerbie didn't receive proper recognition for their incredible generosity of spirit, as well as their suffering, and most didn't get the help they needed to cope with the trauma. At the time, counselling wasn't offered as standard practice, and PTSD was barely acknowledged.

We must never forget that 270 people were murdered in one of the worst terrorist atrocities ever carried out in Europe. Everyone on board the plane died, and 11 people in Lockerbie were killed when part of the fuselage smashed into Sherwood Crescent, leaving a massive crater where their homes had been.

I stood at its edge while it was still smouldering and billowing smoke, as the exhausted rescue services searched in vain for people to save. All they could do that night, and in the days to come, was locate and recover the bodies of all of the dead.

One of the youngest was Bryony Owen. She was just 20 months old. Her tiny body was found in a field by a local farmer who had the kindness and compassion to carry her to the town hall. He didn't want to leave the little one on the hillside all alone.

WHILE THE WORLD moved on, people in Lockerbie had to stay and deal with the aftermath. How did that community manage to heal? I returned to discover that it was thanks to the strong bonds forged between local people and the bereaved. I am very grateful to the people of the town for their patience and kindness, and for trusting me with their stories.

Amid all of the horror there were so many acts of humanity and compassion. Women in the town gathered the clothes the dead had been wearing, washed away the dirt and the blood and carefully wrapped them up to send to bereaved relatives, who found comfort in such kind thoughtfulness.

Colin Dorrance was an 18-year-old rookie policeman at the time of the disaster and has since opened his heart and his home to many of the grieving relatives who feel compelled to visit the scene of their heartbreak and loss.

Among them is Renee Boulanger, whose 21-year-old sister Nicole was one of those killed on board Pan Am 103, and Nicole's best friend Kim Wickham. Kim was supposed to have been on the plane sitting right beside Nicole but changed her plans at the last minute. Nicole's body was never found, believed to have been completely destroyed as she was directly above the bomb when it exploded in the cargo hold.

Renee and Kim had always associated Locker-

Renee even told me that if it had to happen to her sister, she was glad it happened in Lockerbie, which is a real testament to the warm welcome they received from the people of this very special place.

One of my most vivid memories at the time of the disaster was people quietly taking their Christmas decorations down. No one wanted to celebrate.

Colin the policeman told me, “We look back but move forward. We don't forget.” And none of us should.

The Playboy Bunny Murder

CONNECTED?
Detectives suspected that the man responsible for the 1975 murder of Eve Stratford (circled above, with Eric Morecambe circa 1974) also killed croupier Lynda Farrow in 1979

WHO KILLED THE BUNNY GIRL?

The Playboy Club was a beacon of 70s glamour, but the murder of a cocktail waitress led Marcel Theroux to investigate more than one killing...

FOUR YEARS AGO, towards the end of 2019, I unexpectedly found myself investigating a series of unsolved killings that took place in the London of my childhood. I should explain that I'm a writer and journalist, not a detective. But I ended up looking into these cold cases after I began corresponding with a 93-year-old woman named Gladys Hayes.

For more than 40 years, Gladys had been seeking justice for her daughter, Lynda Farrow, a croupier at a London casino, who was murdered in January 1979. Over the previous four decades, Gladys had written to a succession of MPs, the editor of the News of the World, the film director Michael Winner and even the then Prime Minister Tony Blair asking for help. Gladys, who died in 2021, was convinced that her daughter's unsolved murder was linked to another unsolved murder that had taken place four years earlier.

In March 1975, an aspiring model and Playboy bunny called Eve Stratford was found dead in the east London flat she shared with her musician boyfriend Tony Priest. There were eerie parallels between Eve and Lynda's murders. Both women had had their throats cut in their own homes, with no sign of forced entry or burglary; both were glamorous, blonde-haired women in their 20s who were linked to lucrative London casinos. From the moment of Lynda's murder, detectives had connected it to Eve's, but even after all this time, neither crime has been solved.

The crimes fascinated me. It seemed incredible, for one thing, that I had never heard of them before. What's more, when I finally met Gladys, she spoke so movingly about her dead daughter. Gladys's sense of loss was undiminished by time. She was still desperate for some kind of closure. Brooding on the details of the crime, she had come up with a theory that connected Lynda's death plausibly to Eve's. She thought that her daughter had inadvertently stumbled upon the identity of Eve's killer and had been silenced.

Through a website devoted to obscure 1970s music, I managed to get hold of contact details for Tony Priest and arranged to meet him in Amsterdam, where he now lives. In his mid-70s, he still possessed a certain rock-star charisma; he was well over six feet, lantern-jawed. His hair, a black mane in the band's publicity shots from the 1970s, was still long but now iron grey.

On 18 March 1975, Tony returned home from work to find Eve's portfolio and a bouquet of dried flowers in the hallway of their flat. Eve had spent the day at meetings with agents, trying to firm up offers of modelling work. Tony called out a greeting to her and opened the door to their bedroom. "And there she was," he >

DOGGED CAMPAIGN
Gladys Hayes spent more than 40 years seeking justice for her daughter Lynda

UNSOLVED
The 1979 murder of Lynda Farrow remains a mystery

◀ told me. "And that was the horror then, you know."

Eve was lying face down on the floor. Tony sank to the ground beside her and found himself kneeling in a pool of blood that soaked through his jeans. Her wounds were obviously fatal. Tony and his housemate Dick called the police, who arrived, sealed off the scene and took Tony, Dick and another housemate called Bernie into custody. Tony's grief at Eve's death was compounded by frustration that he was a suspect. He knew the police were wasting valuable time interviewing him.

AS I BECAME more deeply invested in the cases, I started to track down other witnesses, thinking that I might write a book on the subject. I was also motivated by a feeling of injustice. It seemed astonishing that two women could die so violently in their own homes, and that the perpetrator – or perpetrators – could get away with it.

I was also fascinated by the world that Eve and Lynda had inhabited. I'm old enough to remember the London of the 1970s, its odd mix of shabbiness and charm. The Playboy Club on Park Lane, where Eve worked as a cocktail waitress, had been a beacon of 1970s glamour. Its vision of the good life now seems dated and sexist, but Eve's former colleagues spoke of the place with warmth and enthusiasm. For them, it had been a halcyon time of opportunity and female togetherness.

'I have a theory, but I'm not in a position to name suspects'

I was surprised, too, what raw emotions were stirred in the former bunny girls by the memory of Eve. They were upset and baffled that such a brutal crime could remain unsolved, and wondered if she had crossed paths with her killer on the club's luxurious premises.

The Playboy Club, though remembered largely for the waitresses' distinctive rabbit costumes, was the most successful casino in Europe. Where there are huge fortunes at stake, people's moral compasses can become warped. I spoke to retired detectives who felt certain that the puzzle of Eve's murder was connected to shady goings-on in the club.

By the turn of the century, interest in Eve and Lynda's deaths had dwindled to almost nothing. Eve's relatives were dead; Tony had left the music business; the Playboy Club had closed down. Only Gladys was left, pursuing her lonely quest for justice. Then, thanks to her doggedness, the police finally decided to re-examine both Lynda and Eve's cases and made an extraordinary discovery. They were able to extract DNA from an item at Eve's murder scene, and in 2004 they matched it with another murder.

In September 1975, 16-year-old schoolgirl Lynne Weedon had been walking home from the Elm Tree pub in Hounslow, west London, when she was attacked in an alleyway. She was beaten over the head and raped, and died of her injuries a week later without regaining consciousness. Lynne's death had never been linked to Eve's, but now there was incontrovertible evidence that the two cases were connected. Detectives who had been involved in Lynne's case told me there were also links between Lynne's death and the murder two years later of actress Elizabeth Parravicini, a stone's throw from where Lynne was killed.

SCHOOLGIRL VICTIM

Earlier this year I finally began making a documentary about this story that had come to obsess me. The Playboy Bunny Murder has provided an opportunity to gather the testimony of the living witnesses, pull together all the threads of the cases and see if any new answers could emerge. We have been able to rule out some suspects, consider some fresh ones and clarify key aspects of the murders. It has been a sad and painful film to make. The trauma of the murders still ripples out and affects the lives of the victims' friends and loved ones. But I think it is important to remind people of these crimes and of the lives of the women who died: Eve, Lynda, Lynne and Elizabeth.

I no longer share Gladys's view of what happened. I have my own theory about the links between the crimes. And while I'm not in a position to name suspects, I'm confident that justice will be served one day. It took over 20 years for DNA to deliver the breakthrough that linked Lynne Weedon and Eve Stratford's murders. I feel certain that sooner rather than later, technology will be able to give its final verdict.

Lest we FORGET

Two veterans of the Battle of the Atlantic recall the longest – and most crucial – campaign of the Second World War

KEN BENBOW AND Christian Lamb live at opposite ends of the country, with backgrounds equally divergent. He, in his words, “born out of wedlock”, leaving school unable to read or write; she the daughter of an admiral sent to complete her education in France. Now aged 98 and 103 respectively, two factors unite them: their lives were altered by the Second World War, and each played a part in the Battle of the Atlantic – the longest continuous military campaign of the entire war.

Spanning the declaration of war on 3 September 1939 until VE Day on 8 May 1945, the Battle of the Atlantic was so crucial that Winston Churchill declared: “Everything happening elsewhere... depended ultimately on its outcome.”

Benbow saw service in the Battle of the Atlantic on board HMS Crane. His ship was among those escorting Allied convoys crossing the vital route to and from North America, keeping Britain supplied with food, industrial equipment and munitions – more than a million tons of material that was required every week for the nation simply to survive.

Adolf Hitler ordered the sinking of any such vessel bound for the UK. More than 100,000 Allied lives were lost, while an estimated 3,500 merchant ships and 175 warships were sunk, and around 640 German U-boats. Earlier this year commemorations were held to mark the 80th anniversary since the battle was at its height. Both Lamb and Benbow will feature in a special film about the campaign that will be shown at this year’s Festival of Remembrance at the Royal Albert Hall.

“I was so proud to wear that uniform,” Benbow remembers, sitting comfortably at the care home where he lives in Preston. “When I joined HMS

‘With three depth charges left, we fired at the water’

KEN BENBOW

Crane as an Ordinary Seaman in March 1943, I was very excited. It was a wonderful ship, and our captain, Lt Cdr Ralph Jenkins, was excellent.”

For her part, in September 1939 Christian Lamb – then Christian Oldham – was in France when she received a telegram from her father.

“It read: War declared, return home,” she recalls. So she went back to Britain and then became one of the first to join the Women’s Royal Naval Service, known both officially and popularly as the Wrens, working at their headquarters in Trafalgar Square. “This was during the Blitz when we were sent home at 4pm every day before it was dark. Everything went on as normal, although in daytime we would see dogfights overhead.”

Lamb is sitting in her riverside flat in south London by a floor-to-ceiling window with breathtaking view of the capital’s waterway and the vast skies above. As she speaks, it isn’t too hard to imagine

WHAT LIES BENEATH
In May 1941, during the Battle of the Atlantic, a depth charge explodes in an attempt to deal with German submarines

NOW AND WREN
When war broke out, Christian Lamb – now 103 years old – was one of the first to sign up to the Women's Royal Naval Service those same skies lit up by the searchlights of war. As a Wren she was promoted rapidly to become a plotting officer, marking positions of convoys and their escorts on a map at stations in Plymouth, Liverpool and, later, Belfast.

"Plotting was so interesting. You really knew what was going on. In Belfast one day in April a destroyer called HMS Oribi arrived in port and the first thing the crew did was to ring up to ask us down for a drink. So half a dozen of us Wrens went and it was splendid. They were in port for ten days and during that time I got engaged to the First Lieutenant. So that was quite jolly."

His name was John Lamb. But when I ask her about her first memory of her future husband she looks mildly vexed. "No idea. We had a lot of parties and went out. I just happened to fall into step with him. He must have been funny – it would be impossible to be with someone who had no sense of humour. He must have been very taken with me. Mutual, I would think. I wasn't startled when he asked me to marry him. Things were going so quickly in the war, everyone was in a hurry to do everything."

SHORE LEAVE OVER, HMS Oribi left Belfast at 6am and was deployed among the 16-strong escort for a slow Atlantic convoy of 42 ships. Amid terrible storms, a wolf pack of 40 U-boats homed in – and in Belfast, it was Lamb's job to plot the unfolding conflict.

"The Germans aimed everything they had to attack. I was terribly worried. My fellow Wrens, my friends, tried to persuade me to leave the plotting room because they feared I would see the worst news. But I couldn't get that news second hand. I had to be there. I pretended to be calm but I was full of dread, especially when we received a signal that John's ship had rammed a U-boat."

It would be a week before she was able to speak with her fiancé when the convoy arrived in Halifax, Nova Scotia. "I felt so lucky that John's battered ship reached dry land and he survived," says Lamb. "I dare say they were all expecting to die at any time, and we were all expecting them to die. We just took it for granted. So I was very relieved."

She and John were married that December, almost exactly at the same time as Ken Benbow's ship was involved in a skirmish with a U-boat in the Atlantic.

"Our sister ship, the Chanticleer, was told to investigate a U-boat attacking the convoy," says Benbow. "All at once a puff of smoke went up, and over the tannoy came a message from the Chanticleer: 'We have been torpedoed and split in two'. Our captain went full speed ahead to the rescue. The U-boat was waiting there, meaning to sink both of us together, but Chanticleer warned us.

"With just three depth charges left, we fired our guns at the water so the U-boat would think we were dropping depth charges. It kept the U-boat at bay long enough for a tug boat to come out from the Azores and tow the Chanticleer into port."

In April 1944 HMS Crane would depth-charge and sink another U-boat, yet Benbow was never afraid. "I was always too busy running about," he explains. "We had confidence we wouldn't be sunk. We were once hit by a torpedo but it had a dud detonator and didn't explode."

He was just 19 at the war's end and still serving on board Crane. Among his medals are the Legion d'Honneur, awarded by the French since 2014 to those who fought to secure France's liberation – HMS Crane was in the English Channel on D-Day, 6 June 1944, providing protection from U-boats for the Allied ships. Christian Lamb was also involved, having helped plan the Normandy landings from Churchill's secret war rooms in London.

Four days after he left the Navy, Benbow met his future wife, Ada. They were married for 71 years until her death in 2019. Lamb has been a widow since John died in 1991, and is thought to be the last surviving Wren to have played a part in the Battle of the Atlantic. Yet the idea of feeling pride in her wartime work is alien to her.

"I would have been very much annoyed if I hadn't been involved in something sensible at that time, but I don't feel particularly proud," she says with a smile. "I'm just very glad I was a Wren, and not just some ordinary old bag doing the housework." KATE BATTERSBY

FORMULA ONE

THE YEAR OF THE UNDERDOG

In 2009 his car had no engine and his team was in chaos – but for Jenson Button it was to be a fairy-tale year, says Simon Barnes

UNDERDOGS DO BETTER in some sports than in others. Perhaps there's scope for doctoral-level data analysis yielding a figure for every sport in the calendar. We could call it the Woof Index – the bigger the number, the better the chance for the underdog.

It would be something like ten for football, seven for tennis, six for T20 cricket, four for rugby union, three for Test cricket – and 0.5 for Formula One. Naturally, the Woof Index drops appreciably over a full season, so the chance of an underdog victory in the F1 Drivers' Championship is vanishingly small.

But it did happen. In 2009 a fairy tale took over the world's most single-mindedly commercial sport – and the story is now richly retold in a Disney+ documentary series, Brawn: the Impossible Formula 1 Story, fronted by petrolhead film star Keanu Reeves.

It began with a team in chaos. "For a start we had no engine," says Jenson Button, who was the designated number one driver in the Brawn GP team. Even I, no motor-sport expert, can see that this was a critical shortage. Honda had pulled out of F1 racing before the season began, and it looked as if the team they'd left behind would fall apart. Then they were taken over by motor racing maestro Ross Brawn, who had masterminded the dominance of F1 by Michael Schumacher and the Ferrari team in the early 2000s. Brawn had been working for the Honda team, but now he controlled it.

Button had to take a pay cut. "I had one other option [to move to another team], but I decided to stay. I wasn't going to get results elsewhere. The whole team chose to take a pay cut so we could go racing – I wasn't the only one, and I was still getting more than anyone else, so don't feel sorry for me. We did it so we could win races. That's why we were in Formula One."

The car itself looked better once it had a Mercedes engine in it. All the other teams had been testing for a while when Brawn finally got a car onto the track but Button was cautiously optimistic. "It felt smooth. It felt reliable. Ross told me, 'You're eight-tenths of a second quicker than anyone else.' And I thought, 'OK!'"

‘Our fuel guy had gone off to be a plumber... we lost eight seconds at every pit-stop’

SMOOTH OPERATOR
Button moved through the field at Interlagos to finish fifth and clinch the title

Button won that first race, and went on to win six of the first seven. “It’s amazing how quickly the goalposts move,” he says. “The first win was amazing. The second was great. So by the next race I was telling myself, I have to win. You start to put real pressure on yourself.” That pressure was to become almost too much.

The first part of that season was a heady time. Button had always been admired for his smoothness as a driver. But behind that widespread admiration was the hint that maybe he couldn’t really do it under extreme pressure, that he would always be just a hair’s breadth away from excellence.

Yet he had become the driver that all others were trying to catch, in the car that everyone envied. “Many things gave us the edge,” Button says. “There had been a change in the regulations and when that happens there’s always room to find something.”

What the design team found was something called a double diffuser. Formula One is as much about aerodynamics as engine power. The innovations that Brawn introduced allowed the airflow underneath the car to pull it down onto the track. It stuck better, so it got better grip and that brought better control at high speed. In short, you could go round corners quicker.

“The best bit was that nobody looked at the rest of the car,” says Button. “We weren’t the only ones to have developed a double diffuser; two other teams had a similar thing. Everyone was talking about whether or not it was legal. Well, it was, but the point was that the whole car was fantastic, from the nose cone to the rear wing. Everything worked in unison. And the team was so united. We didn’t think we had a job, and then we were given a chance to go racing. It was such a journey. When I see anyone from that year, we’re always smiling before we speak – it was a special year in all our lives.”

But it nearly wasn’t. The seventh race was the last race Button won in the 17-race season. The other teams had caught up technically and it had gone from being a breeze to a struggle. Button’s competence brought him a string of minor placings, which won him useful points, but were a long way from decisive.

The penultimate race was in Brazil and Button had qualified way back in 14th place on the grid.

“It wasn’t that we didn’t have the pace, we made a bad decision about tyres,” he says. “I was really struggling under pressure – the thought that this might be my only chance to win the championship. There was silence in the car as we drove away from the track.

“Then my dad said come and have a beer. And he reminded me what I had achieved and where I had come from, as a lad from Frome in Somerset. We talked for an hour, I let it all out and suddenly I could breathe again. I slept really well. And the next morning, I knew I was ready.”

NOT HALF. BUTTON started near the back and began overtaking. “Races like that are great. A long series of important overtaking manoeuvres. You get your fists out. I was driving through the field, ticking them off.” He finished fifth and won the World Championship with a race to spare. “It was the best way to win it. It was the story of our season in a single race. We had to fight just to be on the grid.”

No team owner, no engine, a pay cut and no one to even put the fuel in the car... but Button was champion of the world. He had a great car, a beautiful driving style and at the end he showed his racing mettle.

He left the team the following season and joined McLaren alongside the young Lewis Hamilton. Believe it or not, he says 2009 wasn’t his best season – that was 2011 when he finished second to Sebastian Vettel. “If I’d been the driver I was in 2011 back in 2009 – it wouldn’t have been nearly so exciting,” he says with a smile.

As it was, 2009 was a year of beauty – and the last time the underdog barked in Formula One.

All four episodes of Brawn: the Impossible Formula 1 Story are on Disney+ from Wednesday

Yes, Cinderella, you shall go to the ball – and get there damn quick. “That was the moment,” Button says, savouring it all over again. “I knew then that we had a car that was seriously good, but we still weren’t ready. Back in those days we had mid-race refuelling, and our fuel guy had gone off to be a plumber and hadn’t been replaced. In the first race we lost seven or eight seconds at every pit-stop. So we asked him to come out of retirement every weekend for the rest of the season and he agreed.”

Make friendship and support your legacy

One in every 13 older people in the UK is often lonely. Many go weeks, sometimes months, without speaking to anyone. As vital services move online and out of reach, some older people are becoming even more disconnected from a fast-changing world.

With the number of isolated older people set to rise, Age UK's friendship services will always be vital.

By leaving a gift in your will, you can help provide friendship and support to older people in the years to come. You'll help them share memories, laughs and struggles, and build lasting, life-changing friendships through weekly friendship calls. From giving an older person someone to turn to for support with money or practical problems, to helping them to make new friends in their community, your gift will mean they can begin to reconnect with life.

If you want to create a legacy of friendship and support and leave a world less lonely, we'd love to chat with you.

If you share our belief that lonely older people should be treated with kindness, dignity and respect, please call Jane and our Gifts in Wills team to learn about the impact a gift in your will could make. They'll be happy to answer any questions and give you the information you need to decide if this way of giving is right for you.

Thank you.

CENTURY QUIZ

Esther Rantzen, Homer Simpson, the Daleks... how well do you remember the 1990s and 2000s?

1 NAKED HOLLYWOOD 1991

Arnold Schwarzenegger was promoting a new documentary series called Naked Hollywood. But it wasn't what was on the cover that was significant about this issue. On Friday 1 March 1991 the duopoly that had always existed between Radio Times and TV Times was lifted, which meant that each magazine could publish listings for BBC, ITV, Channel 4 and all the satellite and cable channels.

In which year was TV Times first published?

a 1951 b 1953 c 1955

2 HEARTS OF GOLD 1991

Esther Rantzen was back to present a new series of Hearts of Gold, the show she devised to commend unsung heroes with extraordinary tales of courage and kindness. Esther told RT, "None of these people knows they have been nominated, and to get them to the studio we've had to play a trick." Her disguises in this series included being a duchess and a punk.

What was the title of Rantzen's famous consumer affairs show?

a Rip-Off Britain b Watchdog c That's Life!

3 FUNNY BUSINESS 1992

BBC2's documentary Funny Business took a serious look at what made us laugh. In the first episode, Rowan Atkinson spoke about silent comedy, while his alter ego in the guise of gormless mime-artist Kevin Bartholomew approached the subject from various angles.

Rowan Atkinson said influences for his character of Mr Bean included Charlie Chaplin and Jacques Tati. Which style of comedy were they renowned for?

a Physical and visual b Wit and wordplay
c Satirical

4 NATURE DETECTIVES 1993

The pine marten keen to get its claws on your sarnies was just one of the many animal stars in this BBC1 series about people and the wildlife that interests them. Hosted by Chris Packham and featuring cameraman Simon King, the show invited the public to send in camcorder tapes of unusual wildlife events.

What is the collective noun for an abundance of pine martens?

a A richness b A scarcity c A sparsity

5 GIRL FRIDAY 1994

When the BBC approached Joanna Lumley about making survival documentary Girl Friday, they suggested she did it as her Ab Fab character Patsy Stone, but she rejected the idea.

So she did it as herself: Lumley was left to fend for herself for nine days on Tsarabanjina, off the north-west coast of Madagascar.

On the island, Joanna famously recycled a bra into a pair of what?

a Ear muffs b Knee protectors
c Cave slippers

6 WOMAN'S HOUR 1996

Cover star Helen Mirren and other notable baby boomers from showbiz, sport, politics and journalism celebrated reaching 50 and how suddenly it was the fashionable age to be. On Radio 4, Woman's Hour acknowledged its half-century with a week of celebratory broadcasts.

Who is the current main presenter of Woman's Hour?

a Jane Garvey b Emma Barnett
c Jenni Murray

7 HAVE I GOT NEWS FOR YOU 1997

Have I Got News for You – it's the BBC's 75th anniversary! And as RT celebrated with a 16-page pull-out souvenir, the news quiz regulars, team captains Ian Hislop, Paul Merton and host Angus Deayton, were dressed for the occasion.

When Angus Deayton left the show in 2002, Paul Merton presented the next edition – but who was the first guest host?

a Richard Ayoade b Diane Morgan
c Anne Robinson

8 VICTORIA WOOD 1999

In her week as guest editor of RT's Comic Relief issue, Victoria Wood chatted with her pal and comedy partner Julie Walters, while on the serious side questioned the Chancellor Gordon Brown about Third World debt.

First dished up in 1998, what's the title of Victoria Wood's sitcom?

a Acorn Antiques b Dinnerladies
c Pat and Margaret

9 VETS IN PRACTICE 2000

RT secured the services of Trude Mostue for a new creature feature – Trude's Pet Surgery: first out of the postbag were letters on ticks, fleas and pet passports. The Norwegian vet had come to prominence in 1996 for Vets' School and was back in its sequel, Vets in Practice.

Which actor, who played a TV vet, narrated the series?

a Christopher Timothy
b Amanda Burton c Tom Baker

10 THE SIMPSONS 2004

President George HW Bush once stated that he wanted American families to be more like The Waltons and a lot less like The Simpsons. So no doubt his son President George Bush, who won a second term in the 2004 election, would not be best pleased to see Homer in his seat. As his animated character on the cover of RT in 2006, which English comic co-wrote and guest-starred in an episode of The Simpsons?

a Jack Whitehall b Peter Kay
c Ricky Gervais

11 VOTE DALEK! 2005

It was general election time, the Daleks were back, and the two events were brought together with great effect. The cover was later voted by the public the best British magazine cover of all time.

Which dame played Harriet Jones MP in Doctor Who?

a Edna Everage b Maggie Smith
c Penelope Wilton

12 CHILDREN'S PARTY AT THE PALACE 2006

On 25 June, TV audiences were invited to a Buckingham Palace garden party in honour of the 80th birthday of Queen Elizabeth II.

One of the highlights was a panto written by David Wood with Julian Fellowes. What was it called?

a The Crown Jewels b The Queen's Handbag c The Royal Mint

13 TERRY WOGAN'S 70TH 2008

Godfather for the day at the RT photoshoot, broadcaster Terry Wogan was known by his loyal "family" of fans as the Don Corleone of radio. He was in his 15th year of Radio 2's Wake Up to Wogan, the most listened to weekday show in the UK.

Terry referred to his Radio 2 fans as TOGs. What did the acronym stand for?

a Terry's Old Gang b Terry's Old Geezers/Gals c Terry's Old Goldies

14 COMIC RELIEF 2009

To celebrate 21 years of Comic Relief, RT gave readers the choice to pick their own red nose – cover, that is – from a choice of 21 images.

Comic Relief was co-founded by Lenny Henry and which leading comedy writer and director?

a Richard Curtis b Ben Elton
c Rowan Atkinson

TIME FOR SOME FRESH FACES

Are we seeing too much of Britain's best actors?

NEVER MIND THE POMP and pageantry of our late Queen's Platinum Jubilee, we all remember one special moment – the lady herself taking tea and talking marmalade sandwiches with her guest at the palace, Paddington Bear. The writer of the sketch, Simon Farnaby, recently shared that, when asked how she'd managed to pull off such a sterling performance, the Queen replied, "I do it all the time."

That's fine when you're putting in a cameo as the most recognisable woman in the world. But some actors are becoming as familiar as, well, someone on a stamp, and it's starting to jar.

'Sign up the veteran then find a new face to go alongside them'

I used to applaud the appearance on screen of actors I thought I alone had previously spotted in earlier, smaller roles. I felt like a keen-eyed football scout noting talented players in a non-league fixture. But, increasingly, unimaginative commissioning and bunched-up scheduling mean the same faces keep coming round the carousel.

In the new series of Time, Siobhan Finneran stands out for her compassionate, resigned prison chaplain. But less than a month ago, she was a subtle force for attempted good amid the horrors of The Reckoning, and it's barely a blink since she matched Sarah Lancashire glance for glance in Happy Valley.

NEW BALLS
Fifteen-Love
stars Ella Lily
Hyland and Aidan Turner

All are Bafta-worthy performances, but is she becoming this year's Nicola Walker? Who was, in turn, last year's Olivia Colman. Ringing in my ears, I hear Jane Horrocks being interviewed last year, calling it "a bit limiting for the audience to see the same crowd always coming on".

IT'S NOT THE fault of any of these talented people. With a shocking 90 per cent of actors out of work at any one time, only a remiss agent would choose not to put such jobs in front of their clients, and some of these gigs, despite their heft on screen, only amount to a day or two's work on set.

Similarly, for a producer or writer, it's their cue to pop the champagne cork when any passion project gets the nod from Keeley Hawes, or Stephen Graham, or Jodie Whittaker, or Martin Freeman. And for viewers, these names on the credits are a kitemark of quality.

But when we see the same faces time and time again, always asking us to invest in a brand new character, it becomes more and more difficult to lose yourself in the fictional world they are working hard to create.

I stress again, it's not up to the actors. The likes of Finneran and Graham have been grafting for years and deserve their place in the

DRAMA QUEENS
Jodie Whittaker (above) and Siobhan Finneran in BBC1's prison drama Time

sun. It's for commissioners and producers to be forward-looking, to find and champion new faces.

Case in point: Amazon Prime's drama Fifteen-Love, set in the world of elite tennis coaching. There was Aidan Turner being Aidan Turner – smouldering, dastardly – but the revelation was his co-star Ella Lily Hyland. With almost no previous work on her CV, she was easily Turner's equal with a terrific performance. Somebody took a bet on the newbie and it paid off. Could that be the business model? Sign up the veteran for the production money, then find a new face to go alongside them, so we can lose ourselves properly in the drama and not sit there thinking, "Hang on, that's Dominic West. He's posher than King Charles."

HEAVY IS THE CROWN

And so to the final series of The Crown, which I plan to dive into this weekend. As writer Peter Morgan wrestles with the tragic events of 1997 and the chasm between Queen Elizabeth II and her subjects, I find myself pondering: hasn't he covered all this ground already in his 2006 film The Queen? With an Oscar-winning performance from Helen Mirren that could only have been bettered by one person... ideally with a bear.

Time continues Sunday 9pm BBC1/iPlayer. Series five part one of The Crown is on Netflix from Thursday

The Crown Series 6 episodes 1–4 available Thursday

More than ever, this series of The Crown has generated reams of column inches before it has been released. There have been whispers about the depiction of Diana's ghost, further controversial storylines teased and rumours about what has (and hasn't) been included from this period of the royal family's recent history. That hubbub befits the opening episodes of this sixth and final season, where it's the summer of 1997 and the world's eyes are on Princess Diana (Elizabeth Debicki) and her burgeoning relationship with Dodi Fayed (Khalid Abdalla).

Hushed conversations behind gilded doors in early series have now given way to retelling splashed headlines of 1990s tabloids, with fusty palaces swapped for glamorous yachts bobbing in the Med. As a consequence, the Queen (Imelda Staunton) and Prince Charles (Dominic West) are relegated to the sidelines. As The Crown prepares to wind down, it's certainly still shiny – even if it's not quite as opulent. FRANCES TAYLOR

How to Become a Mob Boss

All 6 parts available Tuesday

Netflix evidently likes this particular documentary format, which jazzes up a regular collection of archive footage and eyewitness interviews by packaging them into a sardonic how-to guide, slyly narrated by Game of Thrones actor Peter Dinklage. Having previously affected to teach viewers how to be a cult leader and how to be a tyrant, now it offers guidance on emulating Al Capone (above), Pablo Escobar, John Gotti and more, by laying out the key characteristics of a properly scary gangster. Many of the stories told are classics. JACK SEALE

SITCOM

Friends All 10 series available now

FULL BOX SET

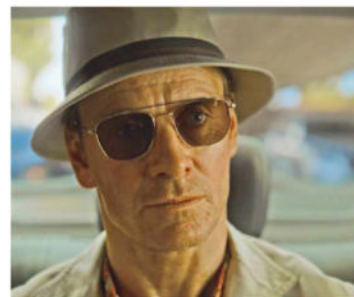

Every rewatch of this all-time great US sitcom will now come with a wounding sadness, following the death last month of arguably the cast's most talented member, Matthew Perry. His turn as brittle wisecracker Chandler Bing is simply a comedy masterclass, with every possible inflection and reaction maximised to make his character even funnier than he already was in the pages of the scripts. Perry – only 54 when he passed away – was very good indeed in plenty of other roles, but if he'd never done anything at all apart from Friends, he would still rank as one of TV comedy's finest ever performers. JS

DOCUMENTARY

Sly ★★★ Available now

"I was born with this snarl," says action-movie icon Sylvester Stallone in this entertaining if not wholly illuminating portrait of the Rocky star's life. On a superficial level, the film delivers the broad strokes of Stallone's story with tabloid efficiency, including his comedy failures and rivalry with Arnold Schwarzenegger. There are a few surprises along the way, too, such as his love-hate relationship with polo. However, Sly is light on interrogative detail, and the result is a documentary that never truly uncovers what makes the man tick. DAVE GOLDER

THRILLER

The Killer ★★★★★ 15

Available from 10 November

An elite assassin finds himself in the crosshairs in David Fincher's grisly but highly satisfying thriller. Michael Fassbender plays the unnamed killer, who prides himself on his professionalism, until he misses his intended target during a job in Paris and realises that his client is looking to clean up loose ends. The film is based on the graphic novel by Alexis Nolent (aka "Matz"), and the characters do feel sketchily drawn. However, Fassbender is a magnetic presence, and Fincher ensures that The Killer is both stylish and heart-pumpingly violent. JAMES MOTTRAM

THRILLER

The 355 ★★★ 12

Available from Saturday

Jessica Chastain stars in this entertaining espionage thriller, which is titled after a female spy who operated during the American War of Independence. When a covert mission to recover a top-secret weapon goes awry, CIA agent Mason "Mace" Brown (Chastain) teams up with a German rival (Diane Kruger), an ex-MI6 computer specialist (Lupita Nyong'o) and a Colombian psychologist (Penélope Cruz) to secure the device before it can be used. The film just about avoids female empowerment clichés to deliver as an enjoyably gritty and glamorous actioner. HANNA FLINT

WHAT I'M STREAMING

TINIE "I've watched all of Wes Anderson's films – I love his stuff," says the musician and presenter of Channel 4's Bangers: Mad for Cars. "He's just done a series of short films on Netflix – it's four Roald Dahl adaptations, and the first one is The Wonderful Story of Henry Sugar starring Benedict Cumberbatch and Ben Kingsley. It was incredible. I also recently watched Top Boy (Netflix), which was great."

THRILLER

A Murder at the End of the World

Episodes 1 and 2 available Tuesday

The key names on the credits for this highly stylised new drama are those of the creators and directors, Brit Marling and Zal Batmanglij: their previous collaboration, Netflix's The OA, was seen by viewers either as an utterly baffling mess, or as one of the greatest television shows of all time. This one looks to have a higher budget, since the icy, remote, futuristic mansion in which its set is so impressively realised. Living there is a mysterious, reclusive billionaire played by Clive Owen, and among the guests invited to come and stay for reasons unclear is hacker and amateur sleuth Darby Hart, played by former Crown star Emma Corrin (above). When someone gets killed, everything quickly gets intensely weird. JACK SEALE

Brawn: the Impossible Formula One Story

All 4 episodes available Wednesday

Keanu Reeves isn't just the narrator of this documentary about the 2009 Formula One World Championship season – he does the interviews as well, showing himself to be a proper motor racing fan and a canny inquisitor. That year is one of the more extraordinary in motor racing history. It began with a brand-new team, Brawn GP, winning the first race of the season in Australia – but as Brawn kept on winning, it became the subject of envious speculation, as rival teams fought furiously to catch up. It's a thrilling story, ably helmed. JS Sport: page 24

Awkwafina and Sandra Oh prove a match made in comedy heaven in this sweet romp. When Jenny (Oh) sneakily films her uptight younger sister Anne (Awkwafina) correctly answering questions that come up on her favourite TV quiz show, the video goes viral, and Anne is offered the chance to appear on the show alongside her quiz-master idol (a genial Will Ferrell). The film is sharply scripted by Jen D'Angelo, who deftly balances the heart and humour of the story, while the two leads are enjoyably cast against type. EMMA SIMMONDS

Monarch: Legacy of Monsters

Episodes 1 and 2 available Friday

Godzilla/Kong monster movies successfully transition to episodic television in a series that strikes a good balance between creature spectacle and character drama. In Tokyo, when a woman taking care of her late father's affairs discovers he had a secret second family, a new monster-tracking team is born. Meanwhile, a team of three monsterologists are investigating a site they think contains dormant super-beasts... and they're dangerously correct. With twin timelines exploring the origins of the story and a juicy conspiracy to unravel, there's plenty more going on here than just reptiles stomping on skyscrapers. JS

Series 4 ep 2 available Friday

It may move at a measured pace but be in no doubt, this alternate-history drama about an ongoing space race can be absolutely brutal. This week, out-of-luck Myles (Toby Kebbell, above, who is excellent as a weary everyman) arrives on Mars to begin his new job, only to find that the gap between the elite and the workers is even starker on a Martian mining base than it is on Earth – and he can't leave. While Myles adjusts to living in a nightmare, two scientists who are disillusioned with Nasa's causes hatch a plot. And things are no less stressful over in Moscow: there's revolution in the air. JS

Lessons in Chemistry

Episode 7 available Friday

Once again, this fine series catches us off-guard: it's the penultimate episode, but we take time to go back in time, not to the early life of chemist turned TV chef Elizabeth (Brie Larson), but to that of her beloved Calvin (Lewis Pullman). In a show that's deeply concerned with how harsh life was for so many people in mid-century America, it's tenderly revealed that his childhood was as much of an unfair ordeal as hers – something that, in a better world, would have made them even more perfect for each other. It's sweet and so sad. JS

PERIOD DRAMA

The Buccaneers

Episode 4 available Wednesday

The opening triple bill of this Anglo-American period romp was quite the rollercoaster. When it came to a stop, Nan (Kristine Froseth) – one of five friends/siblings who left 1870s New York for London, in search of husbands – had got herself into a love triangle with two apparently adorable suitors, one of them a duke. As she brings him home now, though, there is discord: Nan has learned a dark family secret and her sister has just married a gaslighting abuser. The fraught welcome-home party thrown by Nan's mother (Christina Hendricks, above) is an enjoyably tense affair. JS

"I absolutely love Gary Oldman [right, as dissolute spook Jackson Lamb] and Jack Lowden, who's a fellow young Scottish actor... well, if we can still be classed as young! It's a brilliant show." Series 1 and 2 of Slow Horses are available now, while series 3 premieres on 29 November

Bruce Springsteen's Letter to You ★★★★★

Available now

■ The Boss has just announced he'll be returning to UK and Irish arenas next May followed by a further Wembley show in July – and is now bookies' favourite to headline Glastonbury 2024. So to get you in the mood, this documentary from 2020 charts the making of his 20th studio album, Letter to You, with a reconvened E Street Band. Shot in crisp black-and-white, director Thom Zimny's rollicking film is moving and engaging, with keen insight into the binding ties between bandmates. The brotherly chemistry still crackles with life. KEVIN HARLEY

It's 25 years since Victoria Wood debuted her one and only sitcom: she wrote and starred in two series of dinnerladies, then went back to superficially weightier comedy-drama projects and sadly never returned. But the show set in a Manchester factory canteen, staffed by several generations of chatty, batty women and a handful of eccentric blokes, is perfect: at its core it's the best vehicle Wood ever came up with for capturing the natural comedy of working Northern women, and its one-liners are peerless, but as it goes on it skilfully weaves in thick strands of strife and heartbreak. A masterpiece. JACK SEALE

8 Out of 10 Bats

All 7 episodes available now

Chris Packham has described his step-daughter Megan Mcubbin and the other presenters of his homegrown Autumnwatch replacement as "the Sex Pistols of wildlife TV", and much has been made of its measly £50,000 budget. It uses smartphone footage and the location shooting is limited, but this is a professional operation that's more engaging for its independent voice. Political campaigns and local reporting give it an edge, and if you just want charming, expertly curated seasonal nature, that's there too. JS

Time Team

All episodes available now

Time Team is one of the biggest British TV shows to reinvent itself on YouTube: it reappeared there last year, and has now added several more episodes to the collection. There's Dani Wootton's monthly archaeological news programme, and a feature-length special hosted by Gus Casely-Hayford, hunting for a lost Knights Hospitaller preceptory at Halston Hall, Shropshire. Plus, golden-era presenter Tony Robinson returns, visiting Aldbourne, Wiltshire, on the trail of buried memories from the Second World War. JS

Exotic Pet Trade – Exposed: Untold

Available now

Britons are keener than ever to own non-traditional pets – but new exotic housemates bring new animal welfare problems. Pet protection charities say they're overwhelmed, as new pet-owning crazes – often fuelled by social media influencers – mean lucrative business for new breeders with questionable ethics. In this documentary, Nadeem Perera goes undercover to investigate the worst offenders, such as those in the trade of brightly coloured creatures. JS

HORROR

Gaia ★★★★★ Available now

This superbly crafted South African eco-horror follows two rangers (Monique Rockman and Anthony Oseyemi) into the wilderness, where they encounter a father-and-son duo (Carel Nel and Alex van Dyk) living in communion with nature. But is it these wild-eyed survivalists, or the forest itself, that they should fear the most? Director Jaco Bouwer cleverly uses a narrowing aspect ratio to claustrophobic effect, and make-up artist Sulani Saayman and production designer Rocco Pool deserve special praise for doing things with fungi that will guarantee nightmares. STEVE MORRISSEY

A family embarks on an eventful road trip in this richly humane debut from Panah Panahi, son of the great Iranian film-maker Jafar Panahi. A mum and dad (Pantea Panahiha and Hassan Madjoooni), their adult son (Amin Simiar) and his kid brother (Rayan Sarlak) squeeze into an SUV – but are they being followed? Funny and tragic, the film reveals its secrets to entrancing effect. With its bold mix of styles, this is a fable of connection and separation, handled with wit and tenderness. KEVIN HARLEY

SPORT DOCUMENTARY The Football Fraudster

Available from 9 November

This documentary offers a comprehensive analysis of Medi Abalimba, a serial fraudster who told his many victims a series of incredible lies, although one thing he told them, that he was a former professional footballer, was true. Abalimba's career had not been as successful as he made out, and his refusal to accept this caused him to become a fantasist on a frightening scale. The input of psychologist Donna Youngs, filmed in front of a pinboard covered in photos and string, gives the programme an alluring crime-drama vibe. JS

Scores of dramas broadcast their final episodes without people minding too much, but now and again there's one whose departure leaves fans livid. In that select club of cult classics gone too soon is this BBC saga, which ran for just two series in 2011-12. A combination of a dream cast (Romola Garai, Ben Whishaw, Dominic West) and delicious period setting made for an irresistible tale of a fledgeling current affairs programme trying to establish itself in 1956. Series one takes place against the background of the Suez Crisis, with the second run (when Peter Capaldi joins the performers) taking in rising racial tensions and debates around nuclear weapons. JACK SEALE

Part screwball comedy, part Mob-movie pastiche, this outlandish yarn stars Toni Collette as a timid American mom who is installed as the head of a crime syndicate following the death of her grandfather. The broad gagfest isn't subtle, but there's a lot to like, including Collette, whose comic timing is exemplary. TERRY STAUNTON

Now, we get a narrative trick that'll keep interest high – a "tell-all flashback week" that focuses on what went on in Erinsborough while Neighbours was off our screens. Revealing all will be Melanie (Lucinda Cowden, above), who's seen spooling back to the day before her wedding to Toadie. DAVID BROWN

HORROR COMEDY

Renfield ★★★ 15 Available Friday

Gore and gags reign in this hyperactive horror comedy. Nicholas Hoult stars as Dracula's hapless, bug-eating servant Renfield, who has been sourcing blood donors for his boss (Nicolas Cage) for over a century. Looking for a way out, he joins a New Orleans group for people with abusive partners and is inspired by a plucky cop (Awkwafina) to become one of the good guys. The film may be narratively slight, but Hoult's take on the Brit out of water is wonderful, while Cage is deliciously OTT as the vampire granddaddy. DAVE GOLDER

Sequel Catching Fire raises the stakes as previous winners are forced to battle each other to the death, while two-part finale Mockingjay caps things off in epic style. JOSH WINNING

His parents (Djimon Hounsou and Geri Halliwell-Horner) are discouraging, leaving it to a flash executive (Orlando Bloom, above) to keep Jann on the right track. GUARD OF HONOUR

COMMEMORATION

Royal British Legion Festival of Remembrance

9.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

The annual event at the Royal Albert Hall to honour Britain's servicemen and women is always moving. A solemn celebration of the camaraderie of the Forces, it's also a poignant reminder of the victims of conflict: something we are all too aware of with the dreadful news from Ukraine and the Middle East.

This year's focus is on the Battle of the Atlantic, the longest military campaign of the Second World War, and the 70th anniversary of the "forgotten war" – in Korea.

In the presence of the King and Queen, Clare

Balding presents performances from stars including Alfie Boe, Katie Melua, 13-year-old singing sensation Malakai Bayoh and Mica Paris, who will be honouring veterans from the Windrush generation. The evening ends with the traditional flutter of one million poppy petals falling from above.

The two-minutes' silence will be observed earlier in the day at 11am on BBC2; and tomorrow at 10.15am on BBC1 David Dimbleby presents live coverage from the Cenotaph. JANE RACKHAM

REALITY Survivor

7.25pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

Given the brutal, often almost primal nature of this show's challenges, it's surprising there haven't been more serious injuries. Until now. In the middle of a very physical game to win treats for the tribe, host Joel Dommett is forced to holler, "Medic! Medic! Medic!" as two competitors bash heads. There's blood and a feared missing tooth. One campmate looks on with a solemn, "I don't want the marshmallows any more."

Last week's twist of exiling Leilani from Caletón and flinging her into La Nena has added a bit of spice, but there's still far too much screen time wasted ruminating on voting and tactics. Just get on with it.

The world would be a significantly better place if we all embraced the spirit of Dolly Parton. A country superstar and philanthropist, she spreads a little cheer throughout this tribute to her estimable talent.

It begins with Dolly Parton at the BBC, which features hits such as Jolene, 9 to 5 and Islands in the Stream. That's followed at 8.25pm by Dolly Parton: Here I Am, a feature-length profile from 2019 in which she reveals the inspiration behind some of her greatest compositions. At 10.40pm the tribute concludes with her sparkling 2014 Glastonbury performance. PAUL WHITELAW

There's a new coach in the chair tonight. After one promising singer fails to get a turn, presenter Emma Willis (who is consistently underused here) heckles from the wings, prompting will.i.am to give her a temporary go in his seat.

As always, the problem with the blind auditions is that they're not truly blind. The coaches always look to each other for reassurance before making a decision, and doubtful or unsure looks can prove contagious between the quartet. As another hopeful misses out later in the show, Willis notes: "That's the biggest mistake I've seen them make." And she's right. Perhaps her brief turn as a coach should be made permanent... FT

Secrets of the Royal Palaces

7.25pm Channel 5 Catch up via My5

If you can ignore the claim that we'll find out exactly what happened when the royal family raced to Balmoral on the day the Queen died, this is an entertaining dollop of tittle tattle about what goes on behind the royals' closed doors. We do hear stories of a treasure chest of jewellery mysteriously gifted to the Queen Mother, the damage to Windsor Castle's gates caused by an impatient Prince Andrew and the large Surrey palace that Edward calls home. There's a smattering of historic gossip, too, about William the Conqueror's undignified funeral and the toxic wallpaper in Osborne House, but this mainly focuses on modern-day trivia. JANE RACKHAM

Later... with Jools Holland

9.55pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

It's always fun when someone resurrects and repurposes an uncool, anachronistic phrase. And Jools's guest here, Róisín Murphy, has done just that by calling her new album Hit Parade. Surely nobody's said those words in tandem since Benny Hill was at number one. Still, it makes a good contrast with Murphy's forward-thinking, boundary-pushing style.

Another groovy swinger who's full of surprises is Nitin Sawhney, who recently did a track with guest vocals from... Gary Lineker. It's probably one of the most surprising collaborations since Gazza teamed up with Lindisfarne, although a duet with the former striker tonight seems, sadly, too much to ask for. GARY ROSE

DRAMA

The Hollow Crown: Henry VI Part 2

11.00pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

This instalment opens with broadswords swinging and key nobles meeting bloody ends. If you're familiar with the history plays, remember this is a two-part adaptation from a trilogy, so in terms of the original plays, tonight's action mostly comes from Shakespeare's third part of Henry VI.

Most of us won't mind or notice; we can just enjoy another chapter of mafia-worthy feuds from the Wars of the Roses, with a Rolls-Royce cast. Adrian Dunbar's Plantagenet moves to claim the throne, while his shifty son Richard (played by Benedict Cumberbatch) lurks on the sidelines, taking it all in.

FRONTRUNNER

ENTERTAINMENT

Strictly Come Dancing

6.05pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

There are some dances you want to watch over and over again. Nigel Harman's circus-themed paso doble to Smells like Teen Spirit is one of them. It might've been his first ever performance, but it remains one of his strongest – and from the starting blocks marked him out as a frontrunner. That opening weekend he topped the leaderboard and – at the time of writing, anyway – it earned him his best score to date.

So, what's going on? His cha cha in Halloween Week (which was amazingly choreographed – Katya Jones always pulls a blinder) felt top drawer, but it left the judges cold, in both their comments and scores. If nothing else, at least it's given a whiff of unpredictability to who will eventually make the final, especially as the likes of Coronation Street actor Ellie Leach quietly come through the ranks to now be nipping at his heels. FT

FILM OF THE DAY

Little Women ★★★★★
3.20-5.55pm C4

PERIOD DRAMA This eighth screen adaptation of Louisa May Alcott's novel is directed with abundant warmth and affection by Greta Gerwig, who went on to make this year's smash hit Barbie. It's the story of the March sisters (played by Emma Watson, Saoirse Ronan, Florence Pugh and Eliza Scanlan) as they come of age in 1860s New England. The girlhood triumphs and disappointments that unfold are captured with a honey glow, and the impeccable ensemble cast also features Timothée Chalamet, Laura Dern, Bob Odenkirk and Meryl Streep. EMMA SIMMONDS (US 2019, HD)

A Matter of Life and Death ★★★★★
12.35-2.20pm BBC2

FANTASY Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger's dazzling movie stars David Niven as an RAF pilot who survives a plane crash, but is then told he was meant to die and must plead his case in heaven. The film is a thinly veiled allegory questioning Britain's status as a world power, and its visual audacity has made it an enduring classic. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1946, col/BW, HD)

The Scorpion King ★★★★★
12.55-2.40pm ITV1

FANTASY Director Chuck Russell's spin-off from The Mummy Returns is fine escapist hokum. When an evil warlord (Steven Brand) enslaves half the tribes in the desert, he is opposed by a lone warrior. Dwayne Johnson gives a star-making performance as the hero in an enjoyably unpretentious yarn. ALAN JONES (US/Ger 2002, may be edited for violence, HD)

Planet of the Apes ★★★★★
2.50-4.40pm BBC2
(starts 2.35pm in Wales)

SCI-FI This sci-fi gem has spawned sequels, TV shows, a "re-imagining" from Tim

Burton and a rebooted series, but the original 1967 movie is still the best. Charlton Heston is the rugged astronaut who crashes on a desolate planet where the apes rule and humans drool. JEREMY ASPINALL (US 1967, violence, some swearing, brief nudity, HD)

Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire ★★★★★
4.25-7.25pm ITV1

FANTASY As young wizard Harry Potter continues to mature, so too does this magical franchise. Daniel Radcliffe's hero faces his most daunting challenge yet after being mysteriously entered into the Triwizard Tournament. The set pieces are imaginatively staged, with Harry facing off against a fearsome dragon and some creepy lake-dwelling mermaids. SLOAN FREER (US 2005, may be edited for content, HD)

Fisherman's Friends ★★★★★
7.25-9.35pm C4

COMEDY DRAMA Based on a true story, this immensely likeable tale sees a bunch of Cornish fishermen and singers of sea shanties find themselves in line to land a recording deal. James Purefoy plays the leader of the group, with Daniel Mays as the record-company man tasked with reeling him in.

The film is as comforting and warm as one of Purefoy's pullovers. DAVE ALDRIDGE (UK 2018, edited for language, HD)

Black Box ★★★★★
9.00-11.00pm BBC4

THRILLER This tense French conspiracy movie stars Pierre Niney as a forensics expert examining the black box recording of a downed airliner. The disappearance of a colleague while inspecting the accident site makes him question what really happened. Niney convinces in his role and director Yann Gozlan keeps up the suspense. DP (Fr/Bel 2021, swearing, HD)

Terminator: Dark Fate ★★★★★
9.35pm-12 midnight C4

SCI-FI The entertaining sixth instalment in the franchise marks the return of original director James Cameron (as producer and co-writer) and star Linda Hamilton. This time, Sarah Connor is catapulted through time to save a woman from an even more ruthless robot, seeking assistance from her own erstwhile nemesis (Arnold Schwarzenegger, still great). TERRY STAUNTON (US 2019, violence, swearing, HD)

2012 ★★★★★
12 midnight-2.40am C4

DISASTER MOVIE End-of-the-world specialist Roland Emmerich (Independence Day) is firmly in his comfort zone for this blockbuster, in which Earth gets cooked by solar waves. John Cusack is told about the impending armageddon by conspiracy-theory nut Woody Harrelson, and sets out to save his ex-wife (Amanda Peet) and kids. JAMIE RUSSELL (US 2009, swearing, HD)

Freshwater habitats are this week's theme, which means beautiful scenes of species breeding and feeding amid rivers, lakes and waterfalls. Gliding tree frogs in Costa Rica, mugger crocodiles in Sri Lanka and a fish that plays dead in Lake Malawi are all mesmerising.

It's exquisitely put together, even if, just occasionally, the editing tugs at our emotions when, really, it doesn't need to: it's OK, we're already on board. You may be captivated by a bird in the Okavango Delta called a lily trotter, who literally takes his fluffy chicks under his wing and has fabulous long, splayed toes that let him walk on water. Do we need the slightly tacked-on jeopardy that – oh no – maybe one of the chicks is missing?

Never mind, it's a compilation of wonders. And if they feel inspiring, earlier on BBC1 (5.20pm) there's also coverage of this year's Earthshot Prize, hosted by Hannah Waddingham, where activists and innovators with schemes to help fix the planet receive awards of £1m each. Among those presenting awards is Cate Blanchett.

DRAMA Three Little Birds

8.00pm ITV1 Full series on ITVX

This is essentially a race-against-time episode, the person in need of rescuing being Chantrelle, while those trying to reach her are Leah and Hosanna, who are speeding from Dudley to Borehamwood in Aston's car.

They'll need to be quick as predatory Mr Wantage is shrinking Chantrelle's world even further, having now taken her key so he can make his employee a prisoner in the home. And with this being his birthday, Wantage feels as though Chantrelle ought to be making a gift of herself. Away from this charged story of coercion, Aston's financial worries are mounting. And he, too, finds himself at the mercy of another when he gets himself in hock to a moneylender. DAVID BROWN

DRAMA Time

9.00pm BBC1 Full series on iPlayer

A harrowing flashback reveals what happened between Abi (Tamara Lawrance) and her baby.

It stings – especially as we see the raw truth only after her ex-husband visits to ask what he could have done better. “The harder I found it, the more you looked away,” she replies, sadly.

Time is ending before really getting in gear. Insights into inmates such as Lou and Maeve have been fleeting, and not exploring the life of Prison Officer Martin (Lisa Millett) or Marie-Louise (Siobhan Finneran) outside of prison walls feels like a missed opportunity. If Time returns, it might well benefit from a longer stint. FRANCES TAYLOR

NATURE Liz Bonnin's Wild Caribbean

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Manatee – a town in Belize charmingly named after its wild sea cow residents – is one of the stops on Liz Bonnin's eye-opening exploration of the tropical region that shaped her childhood. The naturalist joins scientists on a thrilling expedition to check the health of the endangered marine mammals. Not that they always cooperate, as she finds out the hard way when one enthusiastically splashes her.

Back on dry land, our intrepid host tracks a jaguar suspected of stealing pigs, meet the inspirational women protecting the howler monkey population, visits a family farm that's become a haven for frogs and helps two sloths return to the wild. Albeit slowly. MICHAEL HOGAN

DRAMA Six Four

9.00pm ITV1 Full series on ITVX

As the thriller hurtles towards its conclusion, we're getting closer to understanding what the heck has been going on. We now know – spoiler alert if you've not seen last week's episode – that Julie Mackie was accidentally killed during a botched burglary and that Annabel Wallace has been kidnapped to force her politician father to tell the truth about it. It's also clear that this whole nasty business is bound up in the fight for Scottish Independence and a police cover-up.

Central to it all is politician Robert Wallace (Richard Coyle) but, as one character says, “There's no consequence for people like him,” even though there are fatal outcomes for others. JANE RACKHAM

Silver Spitfire: the Longest Flight

9.00pm Sky History Catch up: Now
Spitfire nostalgia is a powerful thing and shows no signs of dimming 75 years after the last one was built. The star of this film is the celebrated Silver Spitfire, a Mk IX former combat aircraft that flew 50 missions in the Second World War and now faces an ambitious challenge at the hands of its latest pilots: flying around the world.

Lead pilot Matt Jones makes no bones about the symbolism: "For me, the Spitfire is freedom," he says. "This aeroplane is responsible in many ways for the free world we live in." But they have to fly across the un-free world, too – 22,000 miles across 26 countries. With close shaves along the way and stunning vistas, it's quite an adventure. DBU

The Remarkable Journey of Bernard Levin

10.30pm BBC4
Catch up via iPlayer
Only BBC4 would commission this evocative tribute to the pioneering journalist and broadcaster. Watching clips of Levin's bits on That Was the Week That Was, you're struck by how savage he was, mocking interviewees with a cheek that prefigures Ali G or Mrs Merton, but in a sober 1960s suit.

Levin's era-defining journalism (he more or less invented the parliamentary sketch) inevitably takes a back seat here to his TV work, including 1980s C4 travelogues where he wore his learning lightly, and chat-show appearances where he matched Parky or Wogan for easy wit. It's a pleasure to watch. DBU

Hunting Russia's Lost Boys

11.00pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming
Amid the brutality of war, it's easy to forget that the often-conscripted fighters are husbands, sons, fathers and brothers. More specifically, many of the wives, mothers, daughters and sisters of the Russian soldiers who have disappeared during the invasion of Ukraine have been forced to embark upon a war for information regarding their menfolk's fate.

An embarrassed civilian bureaucracy and a secretive military establishment offer little assistance. As this harrowing doc (by independent Russian film-makers) shows, the women's dogged search for news they may not wish to hear and the public aspect of their protest put them in danger. JOHN AIZLEWOOD

TRAVEL

Bill Bailey's Australian Adventure

9.00pm C4 Catch up via C4 streaming

NEW SERIES

As you might expect with Bill Bailey, this is much wilder and weirder than your average celebrity travelogue. So, nothing as obvious as walking over Sydney Bridge or visiting Uluru. Instead, he buys a scruffy accordion that he's spotted in a south-western Australian shop – surely most people buy a souvenir stuffed koala or a hat with dangling corks?

After that he visits a whaling museum in Albany (viewer discretion is advised because of the blood-and-guts photos), and is irresistibly drawn to sing with the Albany Shantymen – "They're like K-pop but with beards and craft ale."

Bill's very tempted to move here, maybe because he has so many funny encounters with locals, who aren't shy about accosting him for a chat and possibly a hug. JR

FILM REVIEWS

DAY

War Horse ★★★★★

12

WAR Showing to commemorate Remembrance Sunday (see feature, p22), Steven Spielberg's film highlights the suffering of the First World War while remaining a family friendly experience. After being sold to the British Army, thoroughbred horse Joey is captured by the Germans and then hidden by a French peasant, all the while being tracked by the Devon farmer's son (Jeremy Irvine, above) who nurtured him. The story, based on Michael Morpurgo's book, is designed to induce tears, but there's no doubting Spielberg's sincerity. ALAN JONES (UK/US 2011, edited for language, violence, HD)

Double Confession
★★★★ 10.45am-12.25pm
Talking Pictures TV PG

CRIME This unusual postwar British thriller blends film noir plotting and summer-holiday local colour in the fictional resort town of Seagate. The arrival of a twitchy newcomer (Derek Farr) coincides with two dead bodies at a nearby inlet, yet suspicion falls on bar-owner William Hartnell and his right-hand man Peter Lorre. TREVOR JOHNSTON (UK 1950, some violence, BW)

Butch and Sundance: the Early Days ★★★
12.05-2.20pm ITV4 PG

WESTERN Although inferior to the Paul Newman/Robert Redford classic from a decade before, this is still an enjoyable romp. William Katt and Tom Berenger bring oodles of charm to the cowboy heroes, and director Richard Lester laces their exploits with the same wit he previously brought to The Three Musketeers. AJ (US 1979, edited for language, HD)

Smallfoot ★★
12.40-2.30pm ITV1 PG

FANTASY A tribe of yeti living in the Himalayas are forced to re-evaluate all they hold dear in this animated adventure. Yeti lore here holds that "smallfoot", or humans, don't actually exist, and this puts Migo (voiced by Channing Tatum) in a conundrum when he comes across a crashed pilot. It's entertaining enough, though maybe a bit heavy on the furry pratfalls. TJ (US 2018, HD)

Peter Rabbit ★★★
4.45-6.30pm C4 PG

FANTASY Beatrix Potter's mischievous bunny bounds into the 21st century in this paw-thumping movie. Peter (voiced by James Corden) and his chums run riot after the death of their nemesis, Farmer McGregor – until his nephew (Domhnall Gleeson) arrives to take charge. Life lessons are spread liberally amid the skirmishes between man and beast. TERRY STAUNTON (Aus/US/UK 2017, HD)

Jumanji: Welcome to the Jungle ★★★★★
6.40-9.00pm Film4 12

ADVENTURE More than a match for the 1995 Robin Williams film, this return to the Jumanji-verse adds some contemporary twists to Chris Van Allsburg's 1981 book. The story sees four teens sucked into the magical game and given incongruous avatars, played by Dwayne Johnson, Karen Gillan, Jack Black and Kevin Hart. Followed by sequel The Next Level. AJ (US 2017, some violence, brief swearing, HD)

Jack Reacher ★★★
9.00-11.35pm E4 15

CRIME Tom Cruise takes on the role of author Lee Child's ex-military cop, teaming with a hotshot lawyer (Rosamund Pike) after a sniper guns down five random victims. The police are convinced they have the culprit, but Reacher suspects a cover-up. Cruise's portrayal is a bit po-faced, but Werner Herzog errs on just the right side of panto as a crime lord. TS (US 2012, violence, swearing, HD)

The Hurricane Heist ★★
9.00-11.00pm Sky Mix 12

CRIME Crooks plan to nab millions in old bank notes from a Mississippi facility during a raging storm in this bonkers thriller. The CGI effects obey no known laws of physics, yet director Rob Cohen (The Fast and the Furious) ploughs on regardless, while Ben Cross hams it up magnificently as a dodgy small-town sheriff. TJ (US 2018, violence, swearing, HD)

Death Line ★★★★★

HORROR This underrated frightener sees cop Donald Pleasence discovering that a colony of cannibals has lived in the London Underground since a Victorian cave-in disaster. Considered strong stuff in its day, the film still manages to be eerie, touching, melancholy and imaginative to a degree rarely seen in the horror genre. AJ (UK 1972, violence)

DOCUMENTARY

The Playboy Bunny Murder

9.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

Marcel Theroux has spent four years researching a series of unsolved murders, committed in the 1970s, that initially seem to have no links other than the victims were women on their own.

His starting point is Bunny Girl Eve Stratford who, in 1975, was found at home with her throat cut. At the time much was made of the perceived sleazy life of the Playboy Club and of its connections to wealthy clients. Four years later Lynda Farrow, a croupier at a West End casino, was found dead in eerily similar circumstances. Neither case was solved but back then, of course, police investigations were hampered by a lack of DNA and CCTV evidence, as well as racial and sexual prejudices.

Theroux is very thorough, talking to people who worked at the Playboy Club, to Eve's then boyfriend, and to members of the original investigation team. Frustratingly, there are more blind alleys than answers, but this paints an alarming picture of what London and society's attitudes were like in the 70s. Continues tomorrow at 9pm.

BOOKS

Between the Covers

7.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

The best thing about this TV book club is that you'll get great recommendations without having to leave your sofa or engage in any of the obligatory awkward chit-chat – which is offset here by host Sara Cox's extreme affability.

This week she welcomes DJ Annie Macmanus and comedians Adrian Edmondson, Chris McCausland and Angela Barnes to extol the virtues of their favourite novels, review a classic and give their verdict on a new release – this time, The Square of Sevens by Laura Shepherd-Robinson. It's not all rave reviews, resulting in some interesting debates. Also, one of the four celebrities admits they cheated in their English literature GCSE exam.

Dad's Army: the Animations

8.00pm Gold Catch up via Now

The second episode of this series in which stories that were wiped by the BBC have been reconstructed by animated means is Under Fire, from 1969. It's the one where incendiary bombs rain down on Walmington, and the town may or may not be harbouring a spy, and contains edges of pathos and lashings of slapstick. One standout scene sees Privates Frazer and Godfrey on Home Guard duty on the church roof at night. "War doesn't suit me, I'm afraid," confesses the latter, understandably.

It's largely the original cast you can hear, though David Benson and Jack Lane turn in sterling work as Walker and Pike respectively. Their touring Dad's Army Radio Show is superb; do catch it if you can. MARK BRAXTON

Matt Baker's Travels with Mum and Dad

9.00pm More4 Also C4 streaming

Matt, Mike and Janice Baker head to Alnwick for tonight's stage in their odyssey around the North, where the tranquillity of the series is shattered when Matt fires the castle's cannon and then when the Bakers blow into some Northumbrian pipes. Otherwise, this is another gentle ramble through some lively history (the Percys' military exploits date back to the 14th century) and eccentric gardens.

The highlight, however, is a lovely detour to Barter Books, where the owners' responsibility for kickstarting the revival of Keep Calm and Carry On motifs is counterbalanced by the labyrinthine charm of their second-hand bookshop and their wholehearted embrace of the printed word. GABRIEL TATE

DRAMA

The Gilded Age

9.00pm Sky Atlantic
Catch up via Now

In Downton Abbey, Julian Fellowes wrote the serving staff of the titular great house as adroitly and sympathetically as the upper crust-ers – but the same can't really be said for the footmen, butlers and cooks of his follow-up The Gilded Age, who largely come across as cardboard cut-outs, open-mouthed at the antics of their 1880s New York paymasters.

Though perhaps this is starting to change in series two. Entertainingly malevolent lady's maid Miss Turner (Kelley Curran) has re-emerged with vengeance on her mind, while steadfast valet Mr Watson (Michael Cerveris) reveals a back story that shines an interesting light on the shifting class systems of the time.

The Sky at Night Meets The Infinite Monkey Cage

10.00pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

Sky at Night season bows out with a match made in the heavens, as the team doubles up with Radio 4's The Infinite Monkey Cage – the show that proves funnies and physics don't have to be mutually exclusive.

Joining Monkey Cage regulars Brian Cox and Robin Ince at BBC's Radio Theatre is Dara O Briain who, with a degree in theoretical physics, is particularly well qualified to bridge the gulf between the comic and the cosmic.

Amateur astronomy is the theme, and among the scheduled space oddities is a chat with a scientist who quit radio DJ-ing to convert plasma waves into sound waves. Now that's a far-out career change. GARY ROSE

HISTORY

Eyewitness to History: Norma Percy on the Fifty Years War

10.30pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

1998 marked the 50th anniversary of both the founding of Israel and the intermittent war between the fledgling state, its Arab neighbours and the displaced Palestinian population. Horrifically we're now enduring the 75th anniversary, but back then acclaimed film-maker Norma Percy's six-part Fifty Years War brought nuance and balance to a situation lacking in both and offered a cautious optimism, unthinkable right now. Today, Percy reflects upon her work before the first three parts are re-shown from 10.45pm. The first episode covers the 1948 and 1956 wars. JOHN AIZLEWOOD

DOCUMENTARY

A Time to Die 10.45pm ITV1 (11.05pm STV, 11.15 Border Scotland; Tue 10.45pm UTV, 11.10pm Wales)

"We've got the ability to take people's suffering away in a clinical way, and it should be my choice," insists Dan, who has multiple sclerosis. He's one of five people in this distressing and powerful film whose lives are intolerable because of degenerative conditions.

In this country it's a crime to help someone die, which Baroness Ilora Finlay fiercely argues shouldn't be changed, even though that means Trevor, who has motor neurone disease, ends his life in the most agonising way. We don't witness that, but the cameras are with a remarkably brave family during a very peaceful assisted death in Switzerland. It's an emotional, controversial subject, but it's important to address it. JR

The Conversation ★★★★★ 12 11.15pm BBC2

TASTE BUDDIES Monica Galetti, Gregg Wallace and Marcus Wareing

FOOD MasterChef: the Professionals 9.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

There's an astonishingly good chef this week who really impresses the judges: "Sensational!" exclaims Marcus Wareing about one dish, while Monica Galetti is almost speechless with pleasure over their pudding. "Really delightful... oh, you are going to be bad for my waistline," she sighs. The others go down the unusual combinations route – scallops with strawberries certainly pushes culinary boundaries – that sometimes work and sometimes don't.

First, though, the four contestants must tackle the increasingly sadistic skills test: one involves squid and the other sweetbread. Perhaps unsurprisingly, there are mixed results. Afterwards one person tearfully admits, "That wasn't my finest hour," while another – a real character – chatters away endlessly through the entire 20 minutes, reducing Monica to mild hysterics as she watches her performance from behind the scenes. There's more tomorrow. JR

THRILLER In this masterpiece from Francis Ford Coppola, Gene Hackman gives a superb performance as the lonely snoop tracking the movements and voices of Frederic Forrest and Cindy Williams, only to find this routine job could be part of a murder plot. Coppola tweaks the idea to surreal effect, while editor Walter Murch orchestrates eavesdropping into a unique wall of sound. This haunting drama skilfully taps into post-Watergate paranoia, resulting in an intense study of a perpetrator turned victim of the surveillance society. TOM HUTCHINSON (US 1974, some violence, swearing, HD)

It Came from Outer Space

11.00am-12.35pm Legend PG

SCI-FI The great Jack Arnold directs this speculative film, based on the Ray Bradbury story The Meteor. The alien occupants of a spaceship downed in the Arizona desert adopt human identities while they repair their vessel. Astronomer Richard Carlson sees it happen, but no one believes him. This is as good as 1950s science fiction gets. ALAN JONES (US 1953, BW)

COMEDY An experienced cast enlivens this British naval farce about an incompetent officer pitted against the wily lower ranks. David Tomlinson is given the command of an ancient destroyer, where Peter Sellers controls the rackets. The chaos that ensues when admiral Wilfrid Hyde White arrives for an inspection is extremely funny. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY (UK 1958, BW)

Vera Cruz

2.35-4.40pm Great Action PG

WESTERN Gary Cooper takes top billing but Burt Lancaster is the man to watch in this terrific Mexico-set western, in which a former Confederate soldier and an outlaw join forces to escort a shipment of gold. Directed at a rattling pace by Robert Aldrich, the film also features supporting turns from Ernest Borgnine and Charles Bronson, billed here as Charles Buchinsky. TONY SLOMAN (US 1954)

MUSICAL If you take this fictionalised biopic of circus inventor PT Barnum with a pinch of salt, you'll enjoy a movie musical in the grand old Hollywood tradition. Hugh Jackman makes for a superb ringmaster, and there's quality support from Zac Efron. La La Land lyricists Benj Pasek and Justin Paul provide the memorable songs. AJ (US 2017, edited for content, HD)

MYSTERY Dan Duryea played a lot of villains in his career, and director Frank Nesbitt's masterstroke here is in making it clear from the start that his hospital orderly is behind the kidnapping of a schoolboy. Adapting the novel by Evelyn Berckman, Nesbitt blends noir and social realism to fascinating effect. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1964, BW)

THRILLER George Clooney brings his taciturn charisma to this self-consciously arty movie about an assassin who holes up in a safe house in the Italian countryside and starts to question his way of life. Director Anton Corbijn's stylish framing ensures that the proceedings retain some mystery, until a predictable climactic showdown breaks the spell. TREVOR JOHNSTON (US 2010, violence, sex scenes)

SPY It's a rare showing for this convoluted espionage tale, in which college dropout Timothy Hutton and his drug-addicted pal Sean Penn pass on US state secrets to the Soviets. Purportedly based on fact, the movie is about the motives for treason and the loss of moral purpose in America. John Schlesinger directs with his usual visual flair. ADRIAN TURNER (US 1985, violence, swearing, drug abuse)

Paranormal Activity

Horror Xtra 15

HORROR Oren Peli's original no-budget chiller has a simplicity and a heightened sense of reality that creates an effective feeling of dread. The story is hardly original (a couple thinks their new home is haunted), nor is the faux documentary-style in which it is filmed. But the film works its creepy spell thanks to the increasingly unpredictable and terrifying scares. AJ (US 2007, violence, swearing)

DOCUMENTARY Secrets of the Aquarium

8.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

NEW SERIES

What does it take to move a shark? The answer is, very little time and an awful lot of stress. Transporting nurse shark El Diablo ("the devil" in Spanish, poor thing) from a temporary pen and up four floors to the main exhibit at the National Marine Aquarium in Plymouth is first up in this behind-the-tank doc.

It's a logistical headache for new curator Marcus. El Diablo can only be out of the water for nine minutes. Once anaesthetised, he's strapped to a trolley and the team sprint as though on their way to theatre in

A&E. Mere seconds could make the difference between life or death for the boisterous creature, and as the clock counts down, it's tense stuff.

Among the 5,000 animals housed in over 100 tanks is also lobster Larry, with whom keeper Andrew has a charming affinity. He's keen to find the crustacean a bigger and better home in the aquarium. Then there's turtle Friday, who is much loved by visitors. But the staff who work closely with him – and are on hand with the head scratches and lettuce – know he's not always charming. FRANCES TAYLOR

FOOD

The Great British Bake Off

8.00pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming

Despite Alison Hammond mistakenly asking one baker how they feel about being in the semi-final, it's quarter-final week and the remaining contestants are in a party mood. They're making sausage rolls (although a few are so underbaked, they're more like soggy rolls) and a Swiss roll cake (possibly called Colin, other names are available) that's a favourite with kids.

The showstoppers for an "anything-but-beige party buffet" have themes such as dinosaurs, Christmas and farmyard animals. The key to making so many different sweet and savoury items is multi-tasking and bunging in as much colour as possible. Not everyone manages it. JANE RACKHAM

ARTS

Will's Book: Shakespeare's First Folio

8.00pm Sky Arts Catch up: Now

Eighteen Shakespeare plays, including The Tempest, Twelfth Night and Measure for Measure, might have been lost for ever if it hadn't been for the first folio of the Bard's work, created seven years after his death. Of the works in that collected edition, half had never seen print before.

With help from experts as well as actors including Mark Rylance, Stephen Fry and Roger Allam, this film engagingly explains how two of Shakespeare's associates fought for years to assemble the texts and get them printed. It's followed at 9.15pm by the RSC's lauded 2013 production of Richard II, featuring David Tennant in the title role. CERI THOMAS

Tony Robinson's Marvellous Machines

8.00pm Yesterday
Catch up via UKTV Play

On the north-western outskirts of London, there's a pleasant mosaic of woodland, lakes and farmland called the Colne Valley. Depending on your point of view, the HS2 rail project that slices right across it will either blight the landscape for good or create a modern engineering marvel – perhaps both.

Tony Robinson goes to see how engineers are glueing together a two-mile viaduct out of 1,000 precast concrete segments, each of which is uniquely shaped to allow for the curves and contours en route. A vast red machine called Dominique is doing the hard part of slotting each 140-ton piece into place. DAVID BUTCHER

The Playboy Bunny Murder

9.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

In the second, concluding episode of Marcel Theroux's disturbing investigation into a series of brutal murders from the 70s, several outlandish theories about the killer are put forward – and eventually dismissed. One involves the Yorkshire Ripper, but that seems too neat to be given much credence.

However, Theroux also hears about another unsolved murder case that may be connected to those of Eve Stratford, Lynda Farrow and Lynne Weedon, and which takes him in a very different and alarming direction... towards a police officer.

Our preview was incomplete, but I suspect there will be more twists and turns before this dreadful story reaches its conclusion. JR

In the second episode, Michael Portillo takes us on a tour of Málaga, a place that many tourists touch down in but then bypass to head to more popular tourist destinations. It's their loss because it's a wonderful, vibrant city, full of bars and restaurants and with many physical reminders of its past.

As Michael is half-Spanish, we probably shouldn't be surprised that, when he strolls the streets (with a flower jauntily stuck in his hat) during the annual Feria, he meets lots of people who share his surname. After a quick sherry in the famous El Pimpi bar, he then visits the spectacular gorge-straddling town of Ronda, where he learns about its turbulent history. JR

The Australian Wars

9.00pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

Film-maker Rachel Perkins's vivid and extremely personal account of the bloody but barely documented frontier wars continues. Following the arrival of the British in Australia, this episode looks at the brutal conflict between 19th-century settlers and First Nations peoples on the island of Tasmania.

It's not for the faint-hearted. The film begins with stories of Indigenous people being driven off cliffs to their death by British forces and peels back the propaganda of the time. This is no dry, history-by-numbers documentary – Perkins is on a mission to transform the past from a dusty thing that can safely be ignored or forgotten into a vital building block for a better future. CT

REALITY

Banged Up

9.15pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming

Enter the final pair of inmates, one a liberal querying whether prison creates criminals, the other a right-wing provocateur convinced that drug addiction doesn't exist.

Tom Rosenthal and Peter Hitchens each receive a testing introduction to prison life, the comedian when his dinner is upended, and the columnist when he falls out first with the Muslim prisoners and then with recovering addicts. Neil Parish and Johnny Mercer, at least, display stirrings of the empathy and compromise so alien to the tiresomely immovable Hitchens, with Mercer's cynicism gradually eroded by his cellmate's sorry life story. Punishingly immersive, once again. Continues tomorrow. GABRIEL TATE

GUITAR MAN
Louis Theroux
chats to musician
Pete Doherty

INTERVIEW

Louis Theroux Interviews Pete Doherty

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Pete Doherty is a changed man. That's likely to be the gist of this chat with the Libertines singer and former world-class hedonist. Forever associated with blazing a trail of tabloid controversy through the noughties, the Libertines were much-loved despite – or partly thanks to – Doherty's well-documented addictions.

He went in and out of rehab and in and out of jail. He dated Kate Moss. The band split and reformed.

But as they now release a new album, All Quiet on the Eastern Esplanade, it's an older and wiser Doherty who welcomes Theroux to the Normandy home where he lives with his wife Katia and their baby daughter, Billie-May.

These days, Doherty likes country walks and bracing swims, we're told. No preview was available, but we can count on Theroux to probe beneath the surface of a rock star's domestic bliss. DBU

DAY

Film Stars Don't Die in Liverpool

★★★★ 11.15pm-12.55am BBC2

15

ROMANTIC DRAMA This beautifully constructed true-life romance charts the passionate love affair between fading (and ailing) Hollywood beauty Gloria Grahame (an icon of classic noirs like The Big Heat) and jobbing Liverpoolian actor Peter Turner in late-1970s Britain. Witty but also moving, it's anchored by Bafta-nominated performances from Annette Bening and Jamie Bell as the unlikely couple. There's also first-class support from Julie Walters, Kenneth Cranham and Stephen Graham as Turner's speak-as-you-find family. JEREMY ASPINALL (UK 2017, swearing, nudity, col/BW, HD)

Wherever She Goes

★★★★ 10.45am-12.25pm
Talking Pictures TV

U

DRAMA Even those who have never heard Australian pianist Eileen Joyce play will engage with her rags-to-riches story in this biopic. In her only acting role, Suzanne Parrett displays spirit and soul as Joyce, who becomes hooked on music after an itinerant artist (John Wiltshire) teaches her to play the mouth organ. It's formulaic but enjoyable.

DAVID PARKINSON (UK/Aus 1951, BW)

The Uncle

★★★★★ 12.25-2.15pm

PG

DRAMA This little charmer of a film offers a perceptive portrait of childhood. The plot follows a seven-year-old boy (Robert Duncan) who becomes an uncle, which catapults him into crisis and isolates him from his family and friends. Filmed on location in Plymouth, it's touching and beautifully performed.

ADRIAN TURNER (UK 1964, BW)

Strategic Air Command

★★★★★ 1.55-4.10pm Film4

DRAMA James Stewart stars here as a baseball player who turns bomber pilot. Director Anthony Mann is clearly more comfortable with the scenes

Rush Hour 3

ACTION Jackie Chan and Chris Tucker reprise their comic partnership in this sub-par sequel. Dispatched to Paris in search of Triad gangs, the mismatched cops find themselves surrounded by crass French stereotypes. Tucker's rat-a-tat-tat quips are great fun, although director Brett Ratner relies on car chases and scantily clad showgirls to distract from the limp script. JAMIE RUSSELL (US 2007, violence, swearing, nudity, HD)

A Few Good Men

9.00-11.50pm

Great Movies

15

DRAMA The ultimate rebel Jack Nicholson has a ball as the ultimate establishment figure in this crisply directed courtroom drama. In fact, Nicholson's role as a martinet colonel amounts to little more than a scene-stealing cameo. The two nominal leads are Tom Cruise and Demi Moore, who play naval lawyers out to learn the truth behind the death of a marine. JOHN FERGUSON (US 1992, violence, swearing)

Cold Pursuit

11.05pm-1.20am C5

THRILLER Norwegian director Hans Petter Moland remakes his own 2014 film In Order of Disappearance, this time with Liam Neeson as the snow-plough driver out to avenge the death of his son. Neeson's actions trigger a turf war between gangs, leading to some oddball deaths. The lurch from grim drama to dark humour can feel a little awkward. TERRY STAUNTON (UK 2019, violence, HD)

Return to Lockerbie with Lorraine Kelly

9.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

At 7.03pm on 21 December 1988 Pan Am flight 103 exploded in mid-air over the small Scottish town of Lockerbie, killing 270 people. Local TV-am news reporter Lorraine Kelly was one of the first on the scene, and in this moving documentary she returns to discover what psychological impact the disaster had on the community.

"People don't appreciate the scale of what happened and the effect on people here," she says after hearing the gruesome details of what both locals and the emergency services experienced. Among them is

Peter Giesecke, who found the body of a young American student who'd been flying home for Christmas hanging over his garden fence. He's still traumatised by it. We're also reminded of the harrowing footage of Jeanine Boulanger collapsing with grief at JFK airport on hearing of her daughter Nicole's death. There was shockingly little PTSD support available afterwards, and Kelly says she's always felt she wasn't entitled to expect or need any because she was "only reporting on" the disaster.

The Secret Genius of Modern Life

8.00pm BBC2

Catch up via iPlayer

Would you want to see what lurks within the fibres of your carpet? Professor Hannah Fry is hesitant when a sample taken from her home goes under the microscope – and yelps when she's confronted by an army of tiny, trundling dust mites.

In one year, 18 kilos of dust gathers in the average home. The answer? The vacuum. A whizz through the appliance's history takes Fry from the superbly named Puffing Billy in 1901 to the present-day Dyson factory. Who knew that if things had gone just a little differently, today we'd all be doing the Spangling instead of Hoovering. FRANCES TAYLOR

LAST EPISODE

Anyone pondering a move to Umbria needs Sylvia's builders' details.

Last week, her house was falling down around her ears, now it's perfect. She's even taking in a houseguest: a student from Rome suspected of murdering a fellow undergraduate.

It's a knotty affair, but far from the only case to solve in this finale – there's also the disappearance of a pig to probe. Not a big deal, you might think, but this porker is an expert at hunting truffles – a pursuit banned (with pigs, at least) in Italy since 1985, but shown here as still prevalent thanks to its lucrative rewards. DAVID BROWN

The issue I always have with these Shetland six-parters is that entire episodes turn out to be red herrings. Take the recent business with those contract killers that dominated the first two episodes – here, there's barely a mention of it. Hitman Howell has been discounted and the focus now shifts elsewhere, to paganism in fact, thanks to Ellen's tattoo matching the markings on the dead sheep being found on the island.

If the mystery goes full folk-horror, I'm all for it. Give me superstition, give me sacrifices, give me warped and weird belief systems. But I'm slightly wary of committing to fear that this, too, will be another blind alley. DB

When Judi Dench recently recited a sonnet from memory on Graham Norton's show, he compared her to a Shakespearean jukebox. She casts a similar spell here when asked about A Midsummer Night's Dream. "I'm not good at analysing it at all..." she mutters, before launching into one of Titania's great speeches in a way that almost breaks the programme open.

For the middle episode, we're joining Shakespeare's life story in the 1590s, in which he wrote Julius Caesar (cue clips of James Mason) and Hamlet (Olivier), but also endured the deaths of both his son, Hamnet, and his father.

Who Killed Santa? A Murderville Murder Mystery

10.30pm BBC3
Catch up via iPlayer

It truly is too early to be talking about Santa Claus – let alone killing him. But the US crime spoof, based on our own Murder in Successville, returns for a seasonal special. Alongside guest stars Jason Bateman and Maya Rudolph, homicide detective Terry Seattle (Will Arnett) must work out who stabbed Saint Nick with a sharpened candy cane. But of course, Bateman and Rudolph haven't been given a script. As surprises are sprung, they must improvise their way through the investigation, all the while trying to keep a straight face.

SCI-FI

The Lazarus Project 9.00pm Sky Max All episodes available via Now

Joe Barton's whipsmart drama, an apocalyptic take on Groundhog Day, returns with hero George (Paapa Essiedu) very much in the doghouse. To recap quickly, the Lazarus Project is "a top-secret multinational organisation dedicated to preventing and undoing mass extinction events" by turning back time. But there are rules, and in the first series George broke many of them in order to save his girlfriend, in the process tossing the planet into a three-week time loop that will destroy the universe. Now the team, led by a ferocious Caroline Quentin, need to find the scientists who might know how to fix things. And they definitely don't want George, who's racked with guilt about his actions, on board.

It's fast, furious and occasionally confusing, but boosted by a top-class cast including Tom Burke and Anjali Mohindra, it's quite irresistible.

DRAMA Cultures and languages collide in writer/director Ryusuke Hamaguchi's highly original study in grief. Adapted from a short story by Haruki Murakami, the film follows a theatre director (Hidetoshi Nishijima) as he travels to Hiroshima for a commission. While there, he builds a relationship with a young woman (Toko Miura) assigned as his driver. The film unfolds in lengthy takes that allow the note-perfect cast to express themselves at an engrossing, natural pace. Hamaguchi's Wheel of Fortune and Fantasy premieres tomorrow. CALUM BAKER (Jpn 2021, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

Hangman's Knot ★★★

WESTERN Roy Huggins, who created several TV series including The Fugitive, also wrote and directed this enjoyable feature. Randolph Scott plays an officer leading a group of Confederate soldiers who steal a Union gold shipment, unaware that the Civil War has been over for a month. They take refuge in a stagecoach station, and a tense chamber piece unfolds. BRIAN BAXTER (US 1952, HD)

Sherlock Holmes and the Spider Woman ★★★

MYSTERY This is one of the best entries in the Basil Rathbone series of Sherlock Holmes films, a wonderfully atmospheric mystery in which the sleuth is pitted against a vicious black-widow killer (the great Gale Sondergaard). It's only a shame that Nigel Bruce's Dr Watson is at his most bumbling. There's more from the Holmes casebook tomorrow on Sky Arts. TOM HUTCHINSON (US 1944, BW, HD)

CRIME Sidney Kingsley's smash-hit play loses none of its claustrophobic intensity on screen under the direction of William Wyler. Kirk Douglas the plot plods amid all the CGI peril. ALAN JONES (US 2013, may be edited for violence)

ADVENTURE Dwayne Johnson is a suitably imposing presence here as the hero of legend. Having completed his 12 labours, Hercules is struggling to live up to his demigod reputation and turns mercenary, joined by a small band of loyal followers. Rush Hour director Brett Ratner papers over the story's cracks with some exciting action. AJ (US 2014, violence, swearing)

CRIME Adapted from Jack Higgins's novel, this thriller concerns the dilemma of a priest who is unable to shop an IRA terrorist because he has identified himself in the confessional. Bob Hoskins is miscast as the cleric, but Mickey Rourke fares better as the terrorist. It's shallow and melodramatic, but as a fast-paced action movie, it does the job. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY (UK 1987, violence, swearing)

My Old Lady ★★★

COMEDY DRAMA Maggie Smith is in Downton Abbey mode again here, playing another old dowager. Kevin Kline is the smart-mouthed New Yorker who inherits a property in Paris, only to discover Smith's aged tenant still living there. Smith and Kline have great chemistry and there's fine support from Kristin Scott Thomas. STELLA PAPAMICHAEL (US/Fr/UK 2014, swearing, sexual references, HD)

FACTUAL DIY SOS: the Big Build

9.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

Every year, the efforts of the DIY SOS team never fail to improve lives that need support. And in this Children in Need special, their attention is focused on the Treetops Hospice in Risley, Derbyshire. It's been helping adults with life-limiting conditions and their families for 40 years, but now wants to extend its services to help bereaved children in a purpose-built, specially tailored building, with rooms for counselling and therapy. It's a cause that's especially close to an emotional Billy, the electrician.

Once again, the regular crew are calling on their chums at Radio 2 to lend a hand along with the usual multitude of committed volunteers. So there are plenty of familiar faces donning hard hats and hi-vis vests – the team wonders if Scott Mills's building abilities have improved since last year, when he was ribbed endlessly. The odd pop star turns up, too, as the ten-day build coincides with the Radio 2 in the Park live weekend in Leicester. Good vibes all round. GILL CRAWFORD

Mary Makes It Easy

7.30pm BBC2
Catch up via iPlayer

Mary Berry really does need to make it easy for Anton Du Beke because he's such a novice cook: "Put it this way – if I was a larder, I'd be bare," he tells her when they meet in sunny Bournemouth. However, that's not strictly true. He once worked as a baker, admits he's quite good with eggs and is very knowledgeable about something he professes not to do.

She shows him how to make crispy squid rings, chicken escalope with tzatziki, beef cannelloni, apricot tarts and salmon linguine – all very simple recipes. But what's especially charming is her frequent descriptions of how delicious everything smells, even if it's only chopped mint.

Saving Lives at Sea

8.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

This show is never a great advert for paddleboarding. How many times have we seen RNLI crews called out to people swept into harm's way after hoping to potter around on a glorified surfboard? This week's paddler-in-peril is off the north-eastern tip of the Scottish mainland. When she drifts a mile out to sea, the crew at Wick begin an urgent search as her family waits anxiously on the shore.

Meanwhile, in Dorset, the Mudeford crew race to rescue a victim of unpredictable weather: a small inflatable boat is struggling in 40mph winds. Back in Scotland, the Fraserburgh crew respond to a mayday call from a fishing trawler that has run aground. And on the Kent coast, a bystander reports a capsized catamaran. DAVID BUTCHER

Inside the Tower of London

8.00pm Channel 5 Catch up via My5

As the Tower of London staff prepare for their role in this country's first coronation in 70 years, Resident Governor Andrew Jackson delves into the archives for some tips. The Yeomen of the Guard are participating in the magnificent procession from Westminster Abbey to Buckingham Palace, but must also do a gun salute and keep the Crown Jewels safe. In 1953 that involved them being armed with loaded pistols, but not this time.

There are numerous fascinating snippets, including the significance of the coronation regalia, seeing the Beefeaters' rehearsals in the early hours, and meeting Reggie, Wellington and Bess, the Tower's cute dachshunds. JR

Taskmaster

9.00pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming

Is Greg Davies tired of sitting on the sidelines on his massive throne? You have to wonder, because in this penultimate episode he's much more involved with the studio tasks than usual. One early challenge sees the contestants making him gifts on a budget, which leads to Greg "unwrapping" and modelling them onstage (including a coat that is memorably described as looking like "Fagin at a disco").

And later on, Greg and Alex Horne take to the stage for the show's final task, testing the contestants' memories with a strange fashion show-cum-striptease. Give him another series and the Taskmaster himself will be in the lab smashing up watermelons and throwing potatoes into golf holes. HUW FULLERTON

NEW SERIES With seven regiments, some dating back to the English Civil War, the British Army's Household Division is a mixture of the Household Cavalry and assorted foot guards. Its soldiers perform the nation's great ceremonies, from Trooping the Colour and the opening of Parliament to sentry duty. Last year saw the coronation of King Charles, who became its Colonel-in-Chief when he ascended to the throne. Here we see how they prepared.

It's not all pomp or even ceremony, though. This episode also highlights how Division soldiers have been training Ukrainian officers for frontline fighting. JOHN AIZLEWOOD

Hullraisers

10.00pm, 10.30pm C4
Catch up via C4 streaming

Only Hullraisers would consider peri-peri chicken and Center Parcs fair game for sexual foreplay; as Paula and Dane's attempts to seduce each other grow ever more outré, matters become more hilarious. Toni, meanwhile, is so jealous of Craig's casual flirting that she raises the stakes with disastrous consequences – and all this after a virtuoso example of community spirit via street theatre to scare off an estate agent. The second of the double bill, in which the friends suspect Rana's mum of being a drugs kingpin, doesn't quite achieve the same balance of reality and farce, but Craig's foray into competitive parenting may ring uncomfortably true for some. GABRIEL TATE

LAST EPISODE A rollicking fifth season comes to a close, tying up all the chaotic loose ends that have made these episodes such a riot. Of course the gang must face off against their nemesis – cannabis dealer and exotic animal enthusiast Manolito. Their plan, which involves something more creative with Lowry paintings than merely stealing them, is a grand one and several supporting characters excel themselves in their own peculiar way. Increasingly, though, Brassic has become as admirable for its serious moments as it is for all the raucous farce; the sadness and joy in the final minutes have been a long time coming and are delivered with tender skill. JACK SEALE

The Newsreader 9.00pm BBC2 Full series on iPlayer from 9 November

Fear is the key theme of episode three, and it's explored at both a macro and micro level. In the news, it's the global financial crisis that's dominating headlines, with markets getting spooked and fortunes (including the wealth accumulated by CEO Charlie) at risk of being lost.

But once the bulletin is over, we see alarm of a different nature seize Helen as she learns that a gossip journalist has an exposé set to reveal details of her troubled past. Feeling powerless to help, Dale seeks the advice of comedian turned talk-show host Gerry who, it must be said, has been a tremendous addition to season two. Slick without being unsympathetic, cocksure but never a caricature, he's fast becoming one of this series' most intriguing characters. Currently, he's Dale's confidante, but this relationship could easily morph into something more intense. DAVID BROWN

All the President's Men ★★★★★

THRILLER This Oscar-winning drama about the Watergate burglary stars Robert Redford and Dustin Hoffman as Washington Post reporters Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein, whose digging ultimately brought down President Nixon. William Goldman's brilliant script makes sense of the labyrinth of corruption, while Alan J Pakula's direction draws telling parallels between the white, open-plan offices of the Post and the murky world of DC politics. There's great support, too, from Jason Robards as the Post's editor and Hal Holbrook as informant "Deep Throat". ADRIAN TURNER (US 1976, swearing, HD)

Doomwatch ★★

1.00–2.50pm Legend

12

THRILLER This spin-off from the ecologically-themed BBC TV series sees Ian Bannen, John Paul and Judy Geeson investigating a sunken oil tanker off the Cornish coast, and the monstrous effect it has on the nearby island residents. It's risibly alarmist, but the environmental dangers it pinpoints are only too topical. TOM HUTCHINSON (UK 1972, some swearing)

Sherlock Holmes Faces Death ★★★★★

1.30–2.50pm Sky Arts

U

MYSTERY In one of the better Holmes movies starring Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce, a clock strikes 13 and murder comes in triplicate. For once, Dr Watson is the plot's prime mover, and the story revolves around an army officers' convalescent home where shell-shocked patients are the cover for misdeeds in a hidden cellar. TH (US 1943, BW, HD)

Blossom Time ★★

Talking Pictures TV

U

MUSICAL Fans of Viennese tenor Richard Tauber will enjoy this rarely-shown romance, set in the Hapsburg capital of the 1820s. Tauber plays a composer who faces a small problem when the girl he loves falls for a titled Royal dragoon of the Archduchess's regiment. It's a bit old-fashioned and slow, but undeniably charming. ROBYN KARNEY (UK 1934, BW)

Star Trek into Darkness ★★★★★

12

SCI-FI Director JJ Abrams pulls out all the stops for this first sequel in the rebooted Star Trek series, in which the Enterprise crew pursues a rogue Starfleet officer (Benedict Cumberbatch). The thrill-a-minute action is given emotional grounding by the growing friendship between Kirk (Chris Pine) and Spock (Zachary Quinto). ALAN JONES (US 2013, edited for content, HD)

Hacksaw Ridge ★★★★★

9.00–11.50pm

WAR This true tale of humility and redemption earned six Oscar nominations, including one for director Mel Gibson. Andrew Garfield stars as a pacifist who joins the US Army as a medic but refuses to fight. After enduring the scorn of his fellow soldiers, he then shocks them all with an astonishing act of bravery. The film offers a valuable lesson in doing the right thing. DAMON WISE (Aus/US 2016, violence, some swearing)

The Breakfast Club

★★★★ 9.00–11.00pm

Comedy Central

DRAMA One of the pinnacles of the 1980s teen pic, John Hughes's film still has much to say to the youth of today. Molly Ringwald, Anthony Michael Hall, Emilio Estevez, Judd Nelson and Ally Sheedy are the students who come together for a Saturday detention and share their justified grievances and self-pitying whinges, learning some hard-hitting truths in the process. DAVID PARKINSON (US 1985, swearing, drug abuse)

A Fistful of Dollars ★★★★★

10.15pm–12.20am ITV4

15

WESTERN Based on samurai classic Yojimbo, Sergio Leone's landmark "spaghetti" western gave TV actor Clint Eastwood his breakthrough big-screen role. He plays the stranger who exploits the rivalry between two families for his own advantage. Ennio Morricone's minimalist score is a gem, and the film was the first of its genre to find an international audience. DP (It/WGer/Sp 1964, violence, swearing, HD)

Wheel of Fortune and Fantasy ★★★★★

1.10–3.40am Film4

15

DRAMA Ryusuke Hamaguchi (Drive My Car) writes and directs this lovely anthology film, comprising three short tales of connection in modern Japan. The episodes begin simply – two friends discuss a date; a student obsesses over her ex-professor's novel; a woman attends her high school reunion – but each delivers a satisfying twist or revelation. CALUM BAKER (Jpn 2021, sexual references, HD)

CHARITY APPEAL Children in Need

7.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

In over 40 years of Children in Need, the annual telethon has never had a child presenter. That's set to change tonight when Lenny Rush, who stole the show in Daisy May Cooper's comedy Am I Being Unreasonable?, joins the presenting line-up. It's hard to believe the Bafta winner is still only 14. It's great to see his star rise.

As well as turns from Doctor Who, MasterChef and Race across the World (see panel, right), there will be a performance by the cast of new Stock Aitken Waterman musical I Should Be So Lucky (with a guest duo singing Especially for You), celebrities taking on Graham Norton's red chair and the announcement of the total raised by Vernon Kay's Radio 2 challenge.

Hosting alongside Rush are Jason Manford, Ade Adepitan, Alex Scott, Chris Ramsey and Mel Giedroyc, whose words of wisdom for the evening are: "Put your feet up, enjoy the show. Have a laugh, have a cry. And if you can give something, please do. Big or small – we're not choosy." FRANCES TAYLOR

DRAMA

The Newsreader

9.00pm (9.30pm Wales; 11.05pm N Ire) BBC2 Full series on iPlayer

Few would have predicted that The Newsreader would become a companion piece to The Crown, but with the bicentenary of Australia being marked, the eyes of News at Six are on Princess Diana and Prince Charles's 1988 tour of the country – and, more specifically, the rumours of a fracture in the royal marriage.

Helen (Anna Torv), though, is in no mood for Windsor-watching as she would much prefer the programme to be focusing on the Indigenous protestors objecting to the country's celebratory tone. She's convinced that an activist called Lynus Preston (Hunter Page-Lochard) ought to be a vital voice amid the pageantry, but the network bosses have other ideas.

REALITY

Big Brother: Live Final

9.00pm ITV1, ITV2
Catch up via ITVX

SERIES FINALE

What would Big Brother look like on ITV? Could it burrow back into the nation's psyche and be relevant again? After some early stumbles (including the bizarre decision to pre-record the launch show), this has been a serviceable iteration of the reality series.

Most of the boxes have been ticked: Diary Room tears, shopping tasks, a slow-burn love triangle and big arguments stemming from the minutiae, such as housemates sniping behind each other's backs about who got first dibs on the shower. It's exactly this sort of petty rubbish that first made BB what it was. More of this, please, ITV, when it (hopefully) returns. FT

The Good Ship Murder

9.00pm Channel 5 Catch up via My5

Succession on a shoestring is tonight's captain's order. Patriarch Roberto is celebrating his 70th birthday with his three grown-up children and his newish wife in tow. On the cusp of stepping down, he is keen for his progeny to stop in-fighting and start taking over his business. Then tragedy strikes, fingers are pointed and guns are waved (often in unintentionally comedic fashion).

Jack (Shayne Ward) and Kate (Catherine Tyldesley) head ashore to join the dots. Not that those dots ever really line up. There's more drama and excitement to be found on a Dover-to-Calais crossing, but it's a bit of fun – if you let the plot, acting, script (and just about everything else for that matter) wash over you. FT

Red Dwarf

10.00pm (not Wales) BBC2
Catch up via iPlayer
This is an important episode in terms of Red Dwarf lore, as it features the debut of Hattie Hayridge as Hilly, a parallel-universe version of Holly (Norman Lovett). It was originally intended as a one-off gag, but Hayridge came on board full-time after Lovett opted not to return for another series.

But enough of all this casting trivia, as what this series two finale from 1988 is arguably best remembered for is Cat's performance of Tongue Tied, which, for one week only, took the place of the opening titles. So popular was this Howard Goodall-penned song that it was released as a single, reaching 17 in the UK charts. DB

COMEDY DRAMA

Breeders

10.00pm Sky Comedy
Catch up via Now
With Susie (Andi Osho) having moved out of London and Darren (Patrick Baladi) preoccupied with his new girlfriend, Ally (Daisy Haggard) is at a loose end. Add to this the fact that she's now working freelance and her kids are that bit older and it's little surprise that she's feeling rudderless.

So when Ally bumps into old acquaintance Evelyn (Jen Brister), it seems like she may have found a port in the storm – even if it does mean getting up at 6am to bake muffins and forking out for a ludicrously expensive tablecloth to impress her new-but-old friend. Will Evelyn be the salvation to Ally's friendship problem? As this is Breeders, the answer is, of course, a big fat no. FT

AWARDS

Country Music Awards

10.35pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer
A new wave of country artists has been making a dent this side of the pond. This year, Morgan Wallen and Luke Combs have embarked on huge UK arena tours and have also nudged into the official top 40 chart.

They are both nominated in this year's Country Music Awards, which aired in the US on 8 November. The CMAs always feature a stellar line-up of performances and special collaborations, but it's Wallen who deservedly looks set to take centre stage. He's nominated in three of the night's biggest categories, while the medley of country classics he'll sing with Hardy and Post Malone, as well as his duet with an as yet unannounced special guest, should be the ceremony's highlights. FT

BORN TO BOOGIE

A new documentary explores the life and work of Marc Bolan

DOCUMENTARY

Angelheaded Hipster: the Songs of Marc Bolan and T Rex

9.00pm Sky Arts Catch up via Now
Something of a curate's egg, this documentary provides a decent overview of a truly magnificent pop star with a unique vision and bountiful gift who had a tragically short life and career.

It's clearly a labour of love – and also a promotional tie-in with a sincerely intentioned yet inessential all-star covers album, which means much of its running time is spent in a recording studio with the likes of U2, Nick Cave and Macy Gray tackling Bolan's catalogue. "The fun thing about this album," declares U2's The Edge, "is you get to hear his songs and how great they were." Surely the best way of doing that is by listening to Bolan himself. The film sparks into life whenever we do get to see archive performance and interview footage of the glam rock sprite in his charismatic pomp. PAUL WHITELAW

7.00 Children in Need

RT Live from Media City UK in Salford, the BBC Children in Need appeal night returns, this year presented by Ade Adepitan, Mel Giedroyc, Jason Manford, Chris Ramsey, Alex Scott and, for the first time, award-winning 14-year-old actor Lenny Rush.

An array of celebrities come together to raise vital funds for the charity organisation that is dedicated to supporting thousands of projects in communities throughout the UK, all of which aim to create a positive impact and enhance the lives of children.

David Tennant stars in a special Doctor Who scene, and there are one-off sketches from some of the UK's most-loved TV shows, including MasterChef and a parody of Race across the World set in Yorkshire, plus music from Jerub, Leigh-Anne and the UK's entry for the Junior Eurovision Song Contest, Stand Unique. The Children in Need choir come together from across the UK to sing a rendition of You Raise Me Up, and there's a performance from the cast of the new stage musical I Should Be So Lucky. FILM REVIEWS

Words on Bathroom Walls ★★★

 9.00-10.45pm BBC3
ROMANTIC DRAMA The director of Percy Jackson: Sea of Monsters, Thor Freudenthal, applies his experience in the fantasy genre to the subject of mental illness in this ingenious spin on teenage turmoil. It's the story of Adam (Charlie Plummer), an American high-school senior who is diagnosed with schizophrenia and has to switch schools. But romance beckons when Adam falls for a fellow student (Taylor Russell). This is a visually striking and thematically daring film, and the touching performances make it easy to care for Adam and his plight. EMMA SIMMONDS (2020, swearing, HD)

Tomorrow ★★★★★ 10.40am-12.45pm Talking Pictures TV
DRAMA Robert Duvall is firing on all cylinders in this fine adaptation of a lesser-known William Faulkner story. He plays a farmer who falls for the pregnant woman who mysteriously turns up at his place of work. The girl is played equally brilliantly by Olga Bellin, a stage and TV actress who appears here in her only feature film. DAVE ALDRIDGE (US 1972, BW)

The Cheyenne Social Club ★★★ 1.50-3.55pm 5 Action
COMEDY Gene Kelly was underrated as a director in his post-MGM period, but his dry wit is given full rein in this western about two cowboys (James Stewart and Henry Fonda) who inherit a brothel. The photography by genre veteran William Clothier looks good, but some may be deterred by Kelly's rather smutty treatment of the subject matter. TONY SLOMAN (US 1970, may be edited for content, HD)

No Time for Tears ★★ 6.00-7.45pm
Talking Pictures TV
DRAMA Anna Neagle stars in this mawkish account of life in a children's hospital – a film whose sole aim is to have you blubbing your eyes out from the off. If the triumphs and tragedies of the kiddies don't have you reaching for the tissues, then the torrid love life of nurse Sylvia Syms certainly will. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1957)

Darkman ★★★

 9.00-10.50pm Film4
FANTASY Sam Raimi directs this splashy amalgam of The Phantom of the Opera and Doctor X. Liam Neeson is perfectly cast as the scientist who dons synthetic flesh masks to take revenge on the mobsters who disfigured him. Pathos and tragedy are always lurking just beneath the horrific surface of The Evil Dead creator's moody and expressionistic triumph. ALAN JONES (US 1990, violence, swearing, HD)

The Expendables 3 ★★★ 9.00-11.15pm Sky Max
ACTION This sequel sees Sylvester Stallone's mercenary recruiting some youthful hotshots to capture arms dealer Mel Gibson. But when the newbies are caught, the "Grey Team" must come to the rescue. There's the usual explosive mayhem, with Harrison Ford, Wesley Snipes and Antonio Banderas among the latest sign-ups. A new documentary about Stallone is now on Netflix – see p31. AJ (US 2014, violence, swearing, HD)

The Dirty Dozen ★★★ 10.00pm-1.00am C5
WAR A smash-hit on its release, this action-packed war movie sees a bunch of sociopaths released from jail to carry out a mission behind enemy lines. Lee Marvin heads the starry cast, which also features Telly Savalas, Donald Sutherland and Charles Bronson. It's skillfully directed by Robert Aldrich, but the excessive violence does leave a bad taste in the mouth. TONY SLOMAN (US/UK 1967, violence, swearing)

Pretty Woman ★★★

 10.40pm-12.35am BBC1 (not in N Ireland)

ROMCOM This movie sent the career of star Julia Roberts into the stratosphere, and her co-star Richard Gere didn't do too badly out of it, either. They make the "sex worker falls for a millionaire" Cinderella tale completely plausible, aided by Garry Marshall's glossy direction, a perky script from JF Lawton and hilarious support playing from Hector Elizondo. JOANNA BERRY (US 1990, swearing, a sex scene, nudity, HD)

The Ninth Configuration

 ★★★ 11.00pm-1.15am Talking Pictures TV
THRILLER It's a rare chance to see this surreal exercise in Freudian vaudeville, which is produced, directed and scripted by The Exorcist's William Peter Blatty. Stacy Keach stars as a psychiatrist who provides radical therapy to possibly insane military veterans in a remote mansion. As bewildering as it is gripping, you'll either love it or hate it. AJ (US 1979, violence, swearing)

Being Roman with Mary Beard
Wednesday 11.30am Radio 4

SO, MARY BEARD, you've immersed yourself in ancient Rome your whole professional life. It fascinates you and you love it, and your enthusiasm for all things Roman has inspired countless others. Would you have liked to live in that time and place? Her answer is emphatic. "Absolutely not!"

Being Roman is the title of a new six-part series that Beard is presenting on Radio 4. It's a departure for our most cherished historian of the period, in that it tells stories not just of emperors or military leaders but also ordinary everyday folk. But the idea of living that life herself fills Beard with horror.

"For a start, I'm a woman. That's a good reason in itself for not going back to that time. Women had no political rights. Essentially, a woman's job was to have baby after baby, and they often died in childbirth. So, no thank you! It was a cruel world and a painful world, whether you were a man or a woman."

Beard is in a studio in Broadcasting House, taking a break from recording her Being Roman script. Now 68, she has retired from academia – she taught classics at Newnham College, Cambridge, for nearly 40 years – but her energy and productivity show no sign of waning.

She has just travelled to London on a sleeper train from Edinburgh, where the night before she gave a lecture that drew an audience of 650. She then spent an hour and a half signing 1,500 copies of her new book, Emperor of Rome. And in addition to the radio series and the book, there's a forthcoming BBC2 documentary that Beard has been filming.

Ancient Rome is a lifelong cause for Beard, so how did it all begin? "I just really got into it at school," she says. "Back in the 60s it was still a time when teenagers could volunteer to go on archaeological excavations, which I think would not be possible now. I did that and discovered there's something hugely affecting about being able still to have physical contact with the ancient world – like, a piece of pottery that was once held by a Roman. I found it quite moving."

Beard benefited so greatly from studying Latin and Greek at school that I wonder where she stands on the teaching of those subjects today. Prime Minister Rishi Sunak has announced that he wants maths and English to be compulsory to the age of 18, so how about Latin as well? "What a nightmare! I don't think any subject should be compulsory after the age of 16!"

WHAT HAVE THE ROMANS EVER GIVEN US?

Plenty, but not all of it was good, says Mary Beard, in front of the Equestrian Statue of Marcus Aurelius in Rome

ROMAN HOLIDAY

She's dedicated her life to studying the ancient world, but would Mary Beard have liked to live in it?

DON'T GET MARY BEARD wrong. She says we must make sure we don't lose Latin and the study of ancient Rome. And she is quite optimistic about its future, thanks to the change in the requirement around studying Latin at university. "There is not a university in the country now where you cannot learn Latin and Greek from scratch to do a classics degree. That is hugely important because it means it's not only people who went to the kind of schools that teach Latin and Greek who can go on to do classics."

Do you live, breathe and sleep ancient Rome? "No! It's a really interesting job, and it does kind of affect the way you look at life. But I do occasionally escape from the ancient world." What do you escape into? "Oh, you know – food, telly, newspapers. All the things everyone escapes into." And what TV programmes have you been enjoying? "Well – I, Claudius, of course. If I could get into Strictly, I think I'd really enjoy it, but I never have."

Perhaps they need to invite you on? "I think that's a big lose for me, isn't it!" Would you, if they asked? "I haven't got the time," she says judiciously. "My friends watch Strictly, and I can join in conversations about it, but I've never actually watched it."

Come on Strictly, where's that invitation?

WAR DRAMA

All Quiet on the Western Front

Radio 4 Extra

To mark Armistice Day, Radio 4 Extra features the acclaimed 2008 adaptation of Erich Maria Remarque's seminal war novel. Published in 1929 but burned at Hitler's behest in 1933, it follows the fortunes of Paul Bäumer and his school pals whose eagerness to join the Imperial German Army at the start of the First World War is rapidly replaced by disillusionment as the brutal reality of trench warfare takes its toll. Youthful camaraderie provides the occasional comic moment, but Dave Sheasby's eloquent dramatisation remains a haunting testament to the ordeal of war.

DETECTIVE DRAMA

Julie Enfield Investigates

Tue-Fri 6am/11am/4pm R4 Extra

What a treat for fans of crime dramas who don't want the grim and gory underbelly of police work at the fore in every other scene. This well-written series (thank you, Nick Fisher) ran on Radio 4 from 1994-9 and stars Imelda Staunton (below) as Det Supt Julie Enfield. She doesn't have a relationship/drink/buried trauma problem, is decent to her colleagues and solves crimes with brain power. The first of four standalone dramas has the detective pit her wits against dubious private health practitioners in Harley Street. ANNA JONES

Analysis Mon 8.30pm Radio 4

The National Literacy Trust produced a report in September into the reading habits of children and young people that showed over half the respondents don't enjoy reading in their free time. Former children's laureate and author of The Gruffalo, Julia Donaldson, asks how this state of affairs has come to be in a country that has produced more successful books for young people than any other. Evidence shows a love for books helps children throughout their lives, so is the report a depressing read, or can there be a happy ending? AJ

The Great Post Office Trial

Monday-Friday 1.45pm Radio 4

The British Post Office scandal saw a faulty accounting system leading to dire, sometimes tragic, consequences for dozens of postmasters wrongly accused of fraud. Journalist Nick Wallis has been snapping at the heels of this story for over a decade, including his original series (available on BBC Sounds) and his 2021 book. Here, he presents updates with fresh evidence from the inquiry, together with a step-by-step recap of events, including the warnings that were ignored, and shocking examples of corporate incompetence and, worse, callousness. CAROLINE FROST

Sunday-Friday 7.00pm Radio 4

To say Helen (Louiza Patikas, above) has struggled to live a free and easy life recently is an understatement. Now, while Rob faces his fate and Jack continues to ask questions, she makes a monumental decision. But as she prepares to enter the lion's den, it looks as though there may be fresh hell to come. Meanwhile, Kate and Jakob clash over both Brian's 80th and Ruairi's 21st birthdays. DAVID CRAWFORD

DOCUMENTARY Bloodlines

So many podcasts need a damn good edit but this co-production from BBC Sounds and CBC Podcasts is the exception to the less-is-more rule. Released on a weekly basis, this thorough piece of investigative journalism by Poonam Taneja sees her and a small team undertake a dangerous trip to Syria to attempt to discover the fate of a little boy called Salmaan, born into the Isis caliphate of 2016. His London-based grandfather is desperate to know whether he is alive or dead. Bold, revealing and sometimes horrifying. ANNA JONES

Forgotten authors are remembered in an appealingly bookish podcast

PICK OF THE WEEK

LITERATURE

The Slightly Foxed Podcast

The title is a term used in the rare books business to denote the appearance of brown spots on old paper. This agreeably un-hecktic podcast comes from the quarterly magazine of the same name and sets out to celebrate the kind of books that are not stacked on the tables in your nearest bookstore but are proven to repay your investment in time. Listening to recent episodes featuring conversations between distinguished biographers and knowledgeable fans of gloriously unfashionable authors such as Ronald Blythe, Patrick Leigh Fermor and Jean Rhys has some of the appeal of eavesdropping on an unexpectedly erudite chat around the counter of a bookshop in a small country town – the kind where it's always late afternoon and it's always raining. DAVID HEPWORTH

TRUE CRIME The Wedding Scammer

Likeable host Justin Sayles's true-crime podcast goes down the rabbit hole, or rather the whole warren, with this fascinating look at Michael Esposito. Described as "Kendall Roy without the polish", this con artist extraordinaire set up a fake media company, Newserati, but this was just the start of his myriad deceptions. As Esposito segues into scamming large sums from those who've saved up for the wedding of their dreams, Sayles and his gang go after this ruthless rogue. JAMES MOTTRAM

HUMOUR The Bugle

Since 2007 The News Quiz host Andy Zaltzman has co-presented this "trans-global satiricist", a sideways look at the week's news not dissimilar to but much more free-wheeling than Have I Got News for You. Zaltzman's original co-host was John Oliver, but then he made it big on US television, so the podcast now uses British comics you may have heard of and Americans you probably haven't. Its mix of analysis, humour and trivia has attracted a big fan base. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

CULTURE Keys to the Kingdom

As Disney celebrates 100 years, this somewhat rains on Mickey's parade. Former employees Amanda Lund and Matt Gourley hear from other ex-"cast members" who dish the dirt on what it's like working as a character in Disneyland. Tales of visitors being violent and being creepy towards any princess are complemented by descriptions of Disney's rulebound culture and undercover enforcers. Voices are disguised, but it's mostly irreverent fun rather than investigative journalism. DAVID CRAWFORD

REVIEW Reel Talk with Honey and Jonathan Ross

Every Monday, the father-and-daughter cinephiles cast an eye over the good, the bad and the ugly hitting our big and small screens. Engagingly chatty with amusing anecdotes a-plenty (the healing effect of Cats, for example), the pair wax lyrically about such fare as the final season of Sex Education and the Beckham documentary. But Scorsese's Killers of the Flower Moon and Netflix series The Fall of the House of Usher come in for a right roasting. JEREMY ASPINALL

Football Clichés

In the past couple of years, Goalhanger has become a major player as a producer of podcasts. Success stories including The Rest Is History and The Rest Is Politics are from the Goalhanger stable, whose co-founders include Gary Lineker. Hence also the Match of the Day Top Ten podcast, and now it has poached another repository of larky football chat, in which host Adam Hurrey and guests have fun at the expense of things like Martin Keown saying he's "addicted to life". Nice team goal. SIMON O'HAGAN

DOCUMENTARY

Burden of Guilt

The intensely troubling story of Tracyraquel Berns, a US army vet who spent decades trying to establish the facts underpinning her chaotically abusive childhood. The records suggest that, aged just two, she'd accidentally killed her four-month-old brother by throwing him out of his crib. But had she really? And if not, who was to blame? While tough-talking journalist Nancy Glass narrates in tones that could shatter windows, Berns reveals some upsetting truths. A gruelling listen.

MATT GLASBY

I'm not a news avoider –
I like Today without the pips

I DIDN'T STOP listening to the Today programme on Radio 4 because I'm a member of that growing sector of the audience the BBC likes to term "news avoiders". In fact, I probably consume more news than ever. I actually stopped listening in the mornings because in this multichannel world I was no longer prepared to tolerate the news serving the tyranny of the clock.

Now that I have choices, I no longer need to put up with interviews being cut short with "I'm afraid that's all we've got time for", and "have to hurry you", or to listen to cornered cabinet ministers spinning out their replies to the easy question with one eye on the minute hand that was heading to the top of the hour, the weather forecast and deliverance from the difficult one.

THIS IS, I suppose, where the weekly Today podcast comes in. It's an opportunity to reflect on the wider implications of an issue rather than getting tangled in the specifics of today's headline. This search for context, this desire to understand whether the people on the ground are as concerned about events as they seem to wish the rest of us to be, inevitably leads to a conversation with the people who were most recently in that position.

Thus Sir Alex Younger, a former head of MI6, was allowed a decent amount of time to talk to Amol Rajan about the parallels between the recent outrages in Israel and the impact of 9/11. Such armchair soldiers will not be able to tell you what their successors are thinking but they may offer some clue to what they're thinking about.

At the same time The Today Podcast must put a human face on the news-gathering process. Martha Kearney described her feelings about seeking out and visiting the homes of parents whose children had not come back from the festival in the desert. We heard her talking to people in Gaza while they were under bombardment. This is a change of tone that will take some time to bed down. "We are human," says Nick Robinson. This shouldn't need saying.

The Today Podcast arrives every Thursday.

TODAY'S CHOICES

Opera on 3: Mozart's The Marriage of Figaro

6.30pm Radio 3

The Salzburg Festival's new production of Mozart's first Da Ponte comedy was met by boos. Headlined "The Marriage, and Miscarriage, of Figaro", the National Review's notice dismissed Martin Kusej's Mafia-style staging as "consistently blatant and coarse". Luckily for Radio 3 listeners, musical matters were on a higher plane, with the Financial Times praising countertenor-cum-conductor Raphaël Pichon's handling of the famously plush Vienna Philharmonic as "brisk, taut and wide-awake" and the cast as "uniformly superlative", while soprano Sabine Devieilhe, the conductor's wife and the show's Susanna (above, with Krzysztof Baczyk's Figaro), was singled out as "knowing, clever and capable of stopping time with the purity of her upper register". MARK PAPPENHEIM

Festival of Remembrance

8.00pm Radio 2

This year's event marks the 70th anniversary of the end of the Korean War and commemorates the Second World War Battle of the Atlantic. Paddy O'Connell presents highlights from the Royal Albert Hall and speaks to Battle of the Atlantic Merchant Navy veteran Ron Quested, as well as performer Katie Melua. Melakai Bayoh and Mica Paris also perform – honouring veterans from the Caribbean – but the most poignant sound is the silence before the traditional poppy drop. DAVID CRAWFORD

TODAY'S CHOICES

Drama on 3: The Spanish Tragedy

7.30pm Radio 3

It's fascinating to return to Thomas Kyd's revenge tragedy just as the 400th anniversary of Shakespeare's First Folio (the first ever published collection of his plays) is being celebrated. Written some ten years before Hamlet, The Spanish Tragedy clearly inspired the Bard, not least with its theme of grief turning to revenge. The violence and seething fury in Kyd's play made it a huge hit in its day, but it's not often seen on stage now so this adaptation by Emma Smith with director Pauline Harris is well worth your time. Robert Glenister is the standout as the avenging Hieronimo. FIONA HUGHES

Thomas Kyd's Spanish Tragedy

6.45pm Radio 3

What use now The Uses of Literacy? Richard Hoggart's pioneering work of cultural studies, published in 1957, is itself a cultural landmark, and it lives on, we're told in Alan Hall's finely crafted re-evaluation, because "even though it's a period piece, it never loses its freshness". What comes through with all the contributors – among them the cultural critics DJ Taylor and Lynsey Hanley, and Hoggart's son Paul – is the deep emotional connection they still feel to Hoggart and his vision. SIMON O'HAGAN

TODAY'S CHOICES

Irresistible: How Cuteness Wired Our Brains and Conquered the World

9.45am Radio 4 FM
So, what is "cuteness" then? According to university professor Joshua Paul Dale, the origins lie with Japan's culture of "kawaii" (or cuteness) which can encompass everything from Japanese women dressing up in Lolita fashion (French rococo meets British Victorian) to the unstoppable Hello Kitty brand and the Pokémon craze. This first episode explores how kawaii permeated Japanese society over decades – the first Hello Kitty coin purse appeared in 1975. But why has it become such a global phenomenon, and is there something more profoundly psychological and instinctual at the heart of our reaction? JEREMY ASPINALL

Composer of the Week

12 noon Radio 3
John and Alice Coltrane are one of the most remarkable couples in all music, not just jazz – even though their partnership only lasted a few years. He was a jazz giant by the time they married in 1965, but in the 40 years by which she outlived him, she became a jazz giant, too. Now Kate Molleson brings them together, saying that "spending time with their work and their life stories is a reboot for one's ears, soul and perspective". SIMON O'HAGAN

John Coltrane (1926–1967) and Alice Coltrane (1937–2007)
RT 1/5. Stepping Up. Saxophonist and composer John Coltrane is hailed as a giant of American cultural history and one of 20th-century music's greatest visionaries, but his second wife Alice was an accomplished keyboardist and harpist who made revolutionary music in her own right, and whose contribution to John's late output has not always been fully recognised. This week Kate Molleson is joined by journalist and Radio 3 broadcaster Kevin Le Gendre to dive into the lives and music and legacy of these figures. Today, they look at the first stages in John's career. All recordings by John Coltrane and musicians, except Miles Davis's So What, which features Coltrane on tenor sax.

TUESDAY Radio

TODAY'S CHOICES

Now You're Asking with Marian Keyes and Tara Flynn

11.00pm Radio 4
Back for a third series and in a late-night slot, author Marian Keyes and actor/writer Tara Flynn (above) have got more freedom to speak, without worries over watershed regulations. And so, in this first edition, while they still touch base with fairly gentle problems sent in by listeners – such as “how do I know if he is the one?” – they are able to discuss more contentious issues, such as maintaining spirituality while stepping away from organised religion and that hot topic of should a man shave his pubic hair? Warm, wise, funny and open, radio’s smartest double-act will have a collection of mini episodes on BBC Sounds once this series ends. ANNA JONES

The Reinvention of Italy

11.00am Radio 4
Arguably, Italy is still reeling from last year’s election of right-winger Giorgia Meloni as the country’s first female prime minister, with her mission to restore national identity by a return to the traditional values of faith, flag and family. But with falling marriage rates, a declining population and the third lowest birth rate in Europe, Meloni’s populist opposition to globalisation and inward migration could face an awkward reality. Politico’s Anne McElvoy tests the water by travelling to the northern region of Veneto, the migrant-driven engine of the country’s economy. JEREMY ASPINALL

TODAY'S CHOICES

Archive on 4: A Broadcasting Life

8.00pm Radio 4 Extra

When Sue MacGregor (above) visited South Africa in 1995 to interview Nelson Mandela, her career came full circle. Nearly three decades before, she had travelled from that country and bagged a month's contract in the BBC's radio news department. Thus began a singular career lasting more than half a century, during which her broadcasting voice was celebrated as one of the nation's finest. Not many can claim to have interviewed everyone from Princess Anne to Barbara Cartland but, until her retirement in 2016, MacGregor enjoyed a privileged seat from which to observe and commentate on the last 50 years' most defining events, and she revisits many here.

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3

Both dating from the young Mozart's years of increasingly reluctant servitude to Salzburg's supercilious Prince-Archbishop, the two concertos included in this Basel Chamber Orchestra concert both sport nicknames that attest to their lasting popularity. The "Jeunehomme" takes its deceptively masculine sobriquet from the young French female pianist Victoire Jenamy, for whom it was written. The "Turkish", meanwhile, makes comical play with the sounds of the Sultan's janissary bands that less than a century earlier had formed part of the Ottoman forces battering at the gates of Vienna. The Mekong river flows for 5,000 kilometres through six countries to the South China Sea. Not only does it sustain more than 60 million lives, it's one of the world's most biodiverse rivers, home to 20,000 plant species and hundreds of mammals, reptiles and birds. But for some years it's been suspected that hydro-electric dams, mostly built by China since the 1990s, may be disrupting the river's ecosystem. There have been droughts and the migratory patterns of fish may have been affected. In Cambodia the BBC's Asia Pacific correspondent Laura Bicker asks whether hydropower, said to tick "green" boxes, is harnessing the river's energy or destroying it. She meets representatives of a new generation who claim that the Mekong is dying but have plans that may breathe life into it. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Leonard Bernstein called it Mahler's greatest symphony. Yet Mahler himself superstitiously avoided that term, apparently hoping to evade the so-called "curse of the Ninth" – whereby no composer since Beethoven had ever lived to write a Tenth Symphony – by giving the achingly valedictory score that followed his Eighth the evocative title The Song of the Earth. As fate would have it, though, he then produced his official Ninth, only to die before finishing his Tenth. There's a curious curse at work, too, in Strauss's symbolist opera Die Frau ohne Schatten, where the Empress has just three days to conceive or else her Emperor will turn to stone. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Who Are We: Doctor Who?

1.00am/2.00am Radio 2
William Hartnell (above) made his first appearance as Doctor Who on 23 November 1963, the day after President Kennedy's assassination. In the first part of this 60th anniversary celebration, lifelong fan Jo Whitley reflects on the way the "Whoniverse" and the real world have continued to co-exist. Most of the Doctors and their companions appear, and comment on the Swinging Sixties, Mary Whitehouse and Dalekmania. Then we hear about the decline and, in 1989, the cancellation of the series. Part two charts how loyal fans and then a decisive drinks party contributed to the Tardis spinning on through time and space in 2005. There are new and exclusive interviews with those responsible – Russell T Davies, Steven Moffat, Chris Chibnall – and the next Doctor, Ncuti Gatwa. The programmes will be on BBC Sounds for 30 days as part of a Radio 2 Celebrates Doctor Who collection. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

The Verb

10.00pm Radio 3
Back in April 2022, the great Irish writer Colm Tóibín gave an interview to the BBC World Service's In the Studio in which he talked about working on a sequel to perhaps his most celebrated novel, 2009's Brooklyn. Now the publication of Long Island is only six months away, and in this special edition of The Verb, it will be fascinating to hear what he has to say about the completed work. Presenter Ian McMillan generally has to corral multiple guests but big one-off interviews, such as with Margaret Atwood, Salman Rushdie and Zadie Smith, give the show a whole new dimension. SIMON O'HAGAN

1.00am Who Are We: Doctor Who?
Ahead of next week's 60th anniversary of Doctor Who, Jo Whitley presents a documentary double bill about the iconic TV show, which the BBC cancelled in 1989 but then reinvented for 21st-century audiences. Episode one, The Classic Years, looks at how the changing attitudes of Britain since the 1960s have been reflected through the Tardis. At 2.00 The Modern Era celebrates its 21st-century return. With showrunners Russell T Davies, Steven Moffat and Chris Chibnall, plus past Doctors, from Sylvester McCoy to Jodie Whittaker. Producer Paul Sheehan

Face behind the voice

Alan Dein

BBC Radio 4

Age 62

Current job

Presenter of Don't Log Off (a new series begins on Radio 4 on 27 November) in which he connects with strangers across the world via social media, exploring what unites people across cultures and borders. "It started in 2012 with just firing messages out there on social media. In more recent years, we've contacted people through a language skills app, where people who want to improve their English chat."

The series follows Don't Hang Up (2002–2010), which Dein co-created with producer Mark Burman. "The concept was to find people at the other end of a telephone line who had never been interviewed. A telephone box was perfect – a person who goes to pick up a ringing telephone is inquisitive."

CV Born in north London, he studied politics at the City of London Polytechnic. "One of my lecturers suggested I read the works of Studs Terkel. That was an early turning point." He produced fanzines and made oral history recordings for the Museum of the Jewish East End. Then radio producer Mark Burman said, "Why don't you do radio?"

Dein's first credit was The Revolution Will Not Be Televised for Radio 3 in 1995. Then in 1997 he was the first to interview Barbara Handler, partly the inspiration for her mother Ruth's Barbie doll.

He also made programmes about auto-recording booths. "Anybody could record their voice for sixpence. In the 1990s we did a call-out, through Radio Times, for readers to send in these discs. We got hundreds."

Beware the Stars! (2003), in which he reunited cast and crew of the 1960 film Village of the Damned, was on Radio 4 Extra earlier this month. Other series include Lives in a Landscape (2008–2015) and Aftermath (2017–18).

Social media – yes or no? "Very much for Don't Log Off, which I have a Facebook page for. And as a fan of old stuff, boy, do you get some incredible images on Instagram."

Best moment "I was best man at the wedding of two people I interviewed on Don't Log Off. A young man in America had fallen in love with a woman in Russia. We did a special in which I travelled to Idaho – I was very touched by it."

Worst moment "I did a wonderful, powerful interview – and recorded over it by mistake. I had to explain to them that I wanted to go back and ask a few questions again..."

First radio memory "'Stewpot' on Junior Choice is the voice I remember most. The soundtrack of my childhood was Radio 1."

Favourite broadcasters "I'm a big Paddy O'Connell fan. I'm inspired by people like Ray Gosling. And I learnt a lot from Christopher Cook."

Ambition/Dream job "I would love to bring together some of the people from Don't Log Off, try to solve the world's problems...and have a party!"

Face behind the voice

Alan Dein

BBC Radio 4

Age 62

Current job

Presenter of Don't Log Off (a new series begins on Radio 4 on 27 November) in which he connects with strangers across the world via social media, exploring what unites people across cultures and borders. "It started in 2012 with just firing messages out there on social media. In more recent years, we've contacted people through a language skills app, where people who want to improve their English chat."

The series follows Don't Hang Up (2002–2010), which Dein co-created with producer Mark Burman. "The concept was to find people at the other end of a telephone line who had never been interviewed. A telephone box was perfect – a person who goes to pick up a ringing telephone is inquisitive."

CV Born in north London, he studied politics at the City of London Polytechnic. "One of my lecturers suggested I read the works of Studs Terkel. That was an early turning point." He produced fanzines and made oral history recordings for the Museum of the Jewish East End. Then radio producer Mark Burman said, "Why don't you do radio?"

Dein's first credit was The Revolution Will Not Be Televised for Radio 3 in 1995. Then in 1997 he was the first to interview Barbara Handler, partly the inspiration for her mother Ruth's Barbie doll.

He also made programmes about auto-recording booths. "Anybody could record their voice for sixpence. In the 1990s we did a call-out, through Radio Times, for readers to send in these discs. We got hundreds."

Beware the Stars! (2003), in which he reunited cast and crew of the 1960 film Village of the Damned, was on Radio 4 Extra earlier this month. Other series include Lives in a Landscape (2008–2015) and Aftermath (2017–18).

Social media – yes or no? "Very much for Don't Log Off, which I have a Facebook page for. And as a fan of old stuff, boy, do you get some incredible images on Instagram."

Best moment "I was best man at the wedding of two people I interviewed on Don't Log Off. A young man in America had fallen in love with a woman in Russia. We did a special in which I travelled to Idaho – I was very touched by it."

Worst moment "I did a wonderful, powerful interview – and recorded over it by mistake. I had to explain to them that I wanted to go back and ask a few questions again..."

First radio memory "'Stewpot' on Junior Choice is the voice I remember most. The soundtrack of my childhood was Radio 1."

Favourite broadcasters "I'm a big Paddy O'Connell fan. I'm inspired by people like Ray Gosling. And I learnt a lot from Christopher Cook."

Ambition/Dream job "I would love to bring together some of the people from Don't Log Off, try to solve the world's problems...and have a party!"

Secret skills "An encyclopaedic knowledge of 60s music, comics and films. And I'm a compulsive collector of vintage paperbacks."

Face behind the voice

Alan Dein

BBC Radio 4

Age 62
Current job
Presenter of Don't Log Off (a new series begins on Radio 4 on 27 November) in which he connects with strangers across the world via social media, exploring what unites people across cultures and borders. "It started in 2012 with just firing messages out there on social media. In more recent years, we've contacted people through a language skills app, where people who want to improve their English chat."

The series follows Don't Hang Up (2002–2010), which Dein co-created with producer Mark Burman. "The concept was to find people at the other end of a telephone line who had never been interviewed. A telephone box was perfect – a person who goes to pick up a ringing telephone is inquisitive."

CV Born in north London, he studied politics at the City of London Polytechnic. "One of my lecturers suggested I read the works of Studs Terkel. That was an early turning point." He produced fanzines and made oral history recordings for the Museum of the Jewish East End. Then radio producer Mark Burman said, "Why don't you do radio?"

Dein's first credit was The Revolution Will Not Be Televised for Radio 3 in 1995. Then in 1997 he was the first to interview Barbara Handler, partly the inspiration for her mother Ruth's Barbie doll.

He also made programmes about auto-recording booths. "Anybody could record their voice for sixpence. In the 1990s we did a call-out, through Radio Times, for readers to send in these discs. We got hundreds."

Beware the Stars! (2003), in which he reunited cast and crew of the 1960 film Village of the Damned, was on Radio 4 Extra earlier this month. Other series include Lives in a Landscape (2008–2015) and Aftermath (2017–18).

Social media – yes or no? "Very much for Don't Log Off, which I have a Facebook page for. And as a fan of old stuff, boy, do you get some incredible images on Instagram."

Best moment "I was best man at the wedding of two people I interviewed on Don't Log Off. A young man in America had fallen in love with a woman in Russia. We did a special in which I travelled to Idaho – I was very touched by it."

Worst moment "I did a wonderful, powerful interview – and recorded over it by mistake. I had to explain to them that I wanted to go back and ask a few questions again..."

First radio memory "'Stewpot' on Junior Choice is the voice I remember most. The soundtrack of my childhood was Radio 1."

Favourite broadcasters "I'm a big Paddy O'Connell fan. I'm inspired by people like Ray Gosling. And I learnt a lot from Christopher Cook."

Ambition/Dream job "I would love to bring together some of the people from Don't Log Off, try to solve the world's problems...and have a party!"

Secret skills "An encyclopaedic knowledge of 60s music, comics and films. And I'm a compulsive collector of vintage paperbacks."

Face behind the voice

Alan Dein

BBC Radio 4

Age 62
Current job
Presenter of Don't Log Off (a new series begins on Radio 4 on 27 November) in which he connects with strangers across the world via social media, exploring what unites people across cultures and borders. "It started in 2012 with just firing messages out there on social media. In more recent years, we've contacted people through a language skills app, where people who want to improve their English chat."

The series follows Don't Hang Up (2002–2010), which Dein co-created with producer Mark Burman. "The concept was to find people at the other end of a telephone line who had never been interviewed. A telephone box was perfect – a person who goes to pick up a ringing telephone is inquisitive."

CV Born in north London, he studied politics at the City of London Polytechnic. "One of my lecturers suggested I read the works of Studs Terkel. That was an early turning point." He produced fanzines and made oral history recordings for the Museum of the Jewish East End. Then radio producer Mark Burman said, "Why don't you do radio?" Dein's first credit was The Revolution Will Not Be Televised for Radio 3 in 1995. Then in 1997 he was the first to interview Barbara Handler, partly the inspiration for her mother Ruth's Barbie doll.

He also made programmes about auto-recording booths. "Anybody could record their voice for sixpence. In the 1990s we did a call-out, through Radio Times, for readers to send in these discs. We got hundreds."

Beware the Stars! (2003), in which he reunited cast and crew of the 1960 film Village of the Damned, was on Radio 4 Extra earlier this month. Other series include Lives in a Landscape (2008–2015) and Aftermath (2017–18).

Social media – yes or no? "Very much for Don't Log Off, which I have a Facebook page for. And as a fan of old stuff, boy, do you get some incredible images on Instagram."

Best moment "I was best man at the wedding of two people I interviewed on Don't Log Off. A young man in America had fallen in love with a woman in Russia. We did a special in which I travelled to Idaho – I was very touched by it."

Worst moment "I did a wonderful, powerful interview – and recorded over it by mistake. I had to explain to them that I wanted to go back and ask a few questions again..."

First radio memory "'Stewpot' on Junior Choice is the voice I remember most. The soundtrack of my childhood was Radio 1."

Favourite broadcasters "I'm a big Paddy O'Connell fan. I'm inspired by people like Ray Gosling. And I learnt a lot from Christopher Cook."

Ambition/Dream job "I would love to bring together some of the people from Don't Log Off, try to solve the world's problems...and have a party!"

Secret skills "An encyclopaedic knowledge of 60s music, comics and films. And I'm a compulsive collector of vintage paperbacks."

SARA'S SIX OF THE BEST

Sara Cox introduces a new chapter of her TV book club – and reveals the identity of her secret celebrity crush...

Between the Covers
Monday 7.00pm BBC2

WELCOME TO CELEBRITY Book Club Wife Swap, the new series in which Sara Cox steals famous people's spouses in exchange for literary recommendations. It hasn't been commissioned yet, but, says Cox, it's "something we could maybe try for a spin-off" from Between the Covers. And it's all because of Rob Delaney. Cox admits to developing a crush on the Catastrophe star last time he was a guest on her book club series, and now that he's back as a guest on her new series she says "things have got worse. I love him so much I want to be married to him for a day a month. Nothing fruity, I just want to go into B&Q with him, do some DIY around the house, get a Domino's, maybe watch a film together. My husband can hang out with his wife for a day, too."

This seventh outing for Cox's programme also features several guests she hasn't expressed a desire to marry – names as diverse as Geri Halliwell-Horner, Bill Paterson, Adrian Edmondson and Anita Rani. Each guest brings in their favourite tome for discussion, but they also discuss one new book per episode, and here Cox talks us through them...

THE SEVENTH SON
by Sebastian Faulks, Hutchinson Heinemann,
£22. RT Shop price £20
incl p&p

"We had Richard Armitage, Rob Delaney, Anita Rani and Jo Brand in this episode, and this book split the panel. It's quite a change in direction from a major author as it's set in the near future [Faulks is most famous for his First World War novel Birdsong] and concerns the birth of a child who makes us question what it means to be a human. I'll admit I found it a bit challenging myself, but it's certainly interesting."

THE SQUARE OF SEVENS
by Laura Shepherd-Robinson,
Mantle, £18.99. RT Shop price
£17.50 incl p&p

"Ooh, this was a really good one. There's real Dickensian element to it – with a mixture of Georgian high society in Bath, and rowdy, seedy carnival folk in London – and this clever, twisty-turny story that binds them together. The guests for this one included Ade Edmondson, Annie Macmanus and the comedian Chris McCausland, and we all loved this – except for Chris, who couldn't really relate to it, but he was very funny about it. We want people with different tastes on the show, though; that adds a little bit of spice to it..."

REMEMBER, MR SHARMA
by AP Firdaus, Sceptre, £18.99.
RT Shop price £17.50 incl p&p

"I had one of my heroes on this show: Sandi Toksvig joined us, as well as Alex Jones and others, and we all thought this book was great. It's a lovely story of a young boy in India discovering the history of his mum, and why people end up a certain way. It was also an education by stealth because it starts around the Partition period, and it's the kind of book where you might do a little bit of Googling at the same time."

FALLING ANIMALS

by Sheila Armstrong, Bloomsbury Circus, £14.99. RT Shop price £14.99 incl p&p

"Falling Animals is a fascinating book and this was a fascinating show. The panel – including comedians Ed Byrne and Suzi Ruffell – all really admired Armstrong's writing, but we questioned whether it was so beautiful, with such stunning similes for instance, that it actually distracts from the story. We also discussed Captain Corelli's Mandolin, which Ed chose for us because he wanted to recommend the book over the film."

DEVIL'S BREATH

by Jill Johnson, Black & White Publishing, £14.99. RT Shop price £14.99 incl p&p

"We had an interesting group of guests here: Kerry Godliman [Ricky Gervais's wife in After Life], Ben Miller, Nish Kumar and the comedian Laura Smyth. Laura used to be an English teacher, which made for a great chat in the studio, but also made me sad that she's not teaching any more. Devil's Breath was another one where we all learned something: it's a murder mystery involving poisonous plants and a professor of botanical toxicology. The panel really liked it, though I got a bit lost, possibly because I was listening to the audiobook and I couldn't flick back to remind myself of things like you can with a physical book."

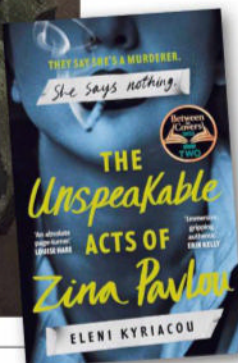

THE UNSPEAKABLE ACTS OF ZINA PAVLOU

by Eleni Kyriacou, Head of Zeus, £14.99. RT Shop price £14.99 incl p&p

"This was maybe my favourite book. It's based on the true story of the second-last woman to be executed in the UK, in the 1950s – the titular Zina Pavlou, a Greek Cypriot woman who could speak very little English. We had Bill Paterson on for this one – everyone fell in love with him; all the make-up girls, the producers – together with Geri Halliwell-Horner and Miles Jupp, who I don't think had hung around with many Spice Girls before. He was quite intrigued by Geri, who was being very Geri, checking our birthdates and astrological signs even as they were counting down the last four seconds before recording started in the studio. And then, suddenly, we're discussing books!"

CREATURE COMFORTS

It's time to get busy in the garden – and help wildlife survive the winter, says Joe Swift

TIME FLIES AND this is my last gardening column for 2023. It's been a strange year for gardening, with some mixed weather, and all I can predict for the future is that our climate is becoming even more unpredictable!

June saw record-breaking temperatures, July and August were wet for many, some of September was stiflingly hot and October brought storms and floods. We've all had some successes and some failures – that's all part of gardening and the learning process – and in the future we'll all need to be resourceful and adaptable.

Although Gardeners' World will be off air until spring, autumn and winter provide the opportunity to really get stuck into your garden. Bigger projects – such as creating raised beds, reshaping lawns, making compost heaps, wiring up fences for climbers, laying a patio or new deck, preparing lawns and wildflower areas, as well as planting most trees and shrubs etc – can all be done in winter. The list is endless and no, they don't have to cost the earth (look to recycle wherever possible). Personally, I love a chunky winter project: think boldly, keep yourself warm out there, and go for it.

"Rewilding" is one potential task, but it's a controversial subject. In truth, it's borderline-impossible in a domestic garden, and seen by some as just growing weeds! I don't get too bogged down in the terminology or the arguments; I just think so many positives have come from it – particularly the general awareness of the power of gardening and what we can achieve together.

Our gardens are an extremely important resource for wildlife.

Maybe a winter project is the way to go: perhaps make and install a bird box or two, build a bat box and a hedgehog house, or make a small wildlife pond – they're all very simple and fun tasks to do.

Think about planting nectar-rich plants for pollinators, and include trees and shrubs with berries for the birds. Leave any perennials and grasses in situ, and celebrate plants in decay (until late winter), as they act as a cover and winter home for many insects. These include ladybirds, which will reward you next year by munching on aphids! Call it rewilding if you want; I just call it gardening with nature in mind – something I've always done and loved.

Have a great winter, everyone!

*Joe Swift is a presenter on BBC2's Gardeners' World

NATURAL DEBRIS

Leaving fallen leaves and dead plant material may seem untidy, but it plays a vital role in supporting garden wildlife

BEGINNER'S GUIDE TO...

Autumn shrub pruning

Pruning scares beginners – some aren't sure where to start, others don't know when to stop. But follow a few basic rules and you won't go wrong.

■ WHEN TO CUT

We prune to keep an attractive shape, increase a plant's health and vigour, increase flowers, keep plants to size, let air circulate between branches and create shapes.

What you prune and why affects timing: prune deciduous shrubs in late autumn to late winter. Spring-flowering shrubs should be pruned after flowering, unless you need to prune harder to get back into shape, which means losing flowers for a year.

■ BE PRECISE

Use sharp, clean tools: loppers, secateurs and a small pruning saw. Cut stems and branches back to a main stem, not quite flush. Leave a small "collar" to heal over, so the cut isn't quite flush with the trunk. If reducing length, cut above an outward-facing bud.

■ THE THREE D'S

Take out any dead, diseased or damaged branches. Where they rub, remove the weaker one. Opt for an open vase shape. Once you've dealt with the three Ds, it's often enough.

■ SUCKERS

Shrubs like weigela, lilac and buddleia can develop dead wood in the centre and suckers at the base. Cut the suckers to ground level. Thin out about a third to a half of what's left again if congested.

■ REGENERATE!

Some plants such as cotinus, buddleia and philadelphus respond to being cut low down. It's best to leave these to the end of winter so they come into active growth after the cut.

RESOURCE

Think about how vital our gardens are for wildlife – why not make a birdfeeder?

Mamma Mia! I Have a Dream
Sunday 6.00pm ITV1

HANDSOME WATERSPORTS INSTRUCTORS, A-list anecdotes, and Alan Carr in his underwear – Zoe Ball saw it all while filming ITV's Mamma Mia! I Have a Dream on the Greek island of Corfu. Here, the host of the all-singing, all-dancing Abba-themed competition shares her secrets from the trip.

The young performers vying for a place in the Mamma Mia! cast were working pretty hard out in Corfu. But, as presenter, you were pretty much just on holiday, right?

No, I was "getting myself into the mood of the show", which is – of course – essential. But yes, it really was a treat to be on such a beautiful island. When I wasn't filming, I hired a Cinquecento and went driving round to all these lovely little bays and beaches, and to the White House, made famous by Gerald Durrell. It's a really good restaurant now.

On other days, we'd all go out together – crew, make-up guys, everyone – on boat trips, because that's really the best way to see Corfu, and you can hire a boat easily.

It sounds like you know the island pretty well.

I first went to Corfu with my dad and brothers and stepmum, many moons ago. It's sort of family folklore because loads of things happened on that holiday. My stepmum and I were flashed by a man in the bushes; we hired a car where the seats weren't actually attached to the chassis; and then we were in a horse and cart when a wheel fell off – so the wheels literally came off our holiday.

What are your favourite spots for a more peaceful Corfu holiday?

Kassiopi and that north-western corner are stunning. There are all these gorgeous little bays, as well as some really lovely boutique hotels. There's also Old Perithia, a beautiful ruined village up in the hills. I was really proud

IT'S ALL GREEK

It wasn't all work for Zoe Ball filming ITV's Mamma Mia! I Have a Dream on Corfu. Good food, good stories and karaoke were part of the mix, too...

GO EXPLORE
The pretty village of Lakones of myself getting there in my tiny hire car, up all these hairpin bends. It was a bit of an adventure – but it was easy to park, at least.

And what about eating?

One of the judges on the show is Jessie Ware [who, alongside her singing career, has a foodie podcast with her mum, called Table Manners]. That was great, because when you go out with Jessie, she just orders, like, "We'll have a bit of that... a bit of this..." I absolutely loved it, but you end up eating so much. That said, I could eat Greek salad and souvlaki every day. There's nothing like Greek salad in Greece.

Were there Dancing Queen antics at night? Kavos is notorious for its nightlife...

A few of the crew went down to Kavos, but I'm a bit of an early-to-bed lightweight these days. There were some karaoke evenings. Alan [Carr, another of the judges] did Don't Go Breaking My Heart, and I wanted to sing Don't It Make Your Brown Eyes Blue, but fortunately they didn't have it. I don't know who I thought I was; I was drunk at the time.

My favourite night out was a meal with Judy Craymer and Anthony van Lasst, though. She created the Mamma Mia! movie and stage show, and he choreographed them – and wow, the stories they have! Anthony worked with my dad [children's TV presenter Johnny Ball] on Playaway, and Judy's a close personal friend of Cher, so I just sat with my mouth open listening to their anecdotes.

Judy told a story about casting Pierce Brosnan in the film, and talking to him about singing lessons. He then said something about maybe his friend Barbara could help him out, and Judy's thinking, "Hmm, we need a proper vocal coach, not just your mate" – but it turns out he was talking about Barbra Streisand. Proper showbiz!

WHITE STUFF
Gerald Durrell's
White House is now a restaurant

Did you all stay together in the villa we see in the show?

I was in a hotel with Alan and Jessie. It's quite surreal when you wake up in the morning, open your curtains, go out to see the lovely sunrise... and there's Alan Carr in his smalls. Still, it was probably worse for him, because my smalls are bigger than his smalls.

Sounds almost romantic. Any Shirley Valentine moments?

None that I know of! The contestants are all young – they taught me TikTok dances! – but they're savvy, so when I was trying to get the gossip, they knew I was fishing. I was definitely trying to stir things up, but they were all pretty professional – it's not like the 1990s [Ball's own, infamous "ladette" years].

But what about you? You're recently single again, so did you find new love on Corfu?

Not this time. When I think of Sky, Mamma Mia!'s male lead, I think of all the boys I've fallen in love with on holiday: those hot ski-instructor types. They were never interested in me, of course – a spotty teenager who basically looked like a boy in a bikini – but you know what it's like when you fall for the watersports instructor. We've all been there, right? ED GRENNY

Discover Malta's magical blend of culture, cuisine, language and landscape on this seven-night group holiday. With its stunning coastline and sunny climate, it's no wonder Malta is a favourite destination for holidaymakers. But Malta's colourful history and influences from its Mediterranean neighbours have also resulted in a treasure trove of historic sites. We'll explore all of these and more with excursions to the fascinating capital Valletta, medieval Mdina, the Three Cities and the nearby island of Gozo.

Tour highlights and inclusions ■ Stay in the coastal town of Mellieha for seven nights ■ Enjoy an excursion to medieval Mdina and St Paul's Catacombs ■ Discover the Three Cities, including a boat trip through the harbour creeks ■ Explore the island of Gozo on a full-day excursion ■ Departures available from London, Edinburgh and Dublin

HOW MUCH WILL PENSIONS RISE?

The Chancellor will reveal all in his Autumn Statement, says Paul Lewis

WE WON'T KNOW until the Chancellor's Autumn Statement on 22 November how much the state pension and other benefits will rise from April 2024.

But we do know what should happen – unless the Government changes the law, as it did in 2021. That was to prevent the state pension rising with the 8.4% increase in earnings, which it said was a post-Covid anomaly. Instead it increased it by inflation, which was then 3.1%.

The law states that once a year the Work and Pensions Secretary must review the general level of earnings and raise the basic and new state pensions to keep up with that rise. The earnings figure used is the increase in total earnings between May and July one year and May and July the next. This year that rise was 8.5%, meaning the state pension should rise by 8.5% from next April.

Not all the state pension is covered by this law, though. Additional amounts – such as Serps, graduated pension and the extra paid to those who defer their claim – do not rise with earnings but are lumped together with other benefits, which the law says must rise in line with prices. That is measured by the Consumer Prices Index (CPI) for September, which rose by 6.7%. So pensioners can expect a two-tier increase, with most of their pension rising by 8.5% and the rest by 6.7%.

There has been speculation that the Chancellor, Jeremy Hunt, might pick a lower measure of wage rises that excludes bonuses (7.8%), or use the 6.7% rise in prices for all parts of the state pension. The “triple lock” would mean he uses the rise in wages (8.5%), but it's a political commitment, not a legal one.

The table below shows what to expect under all three scenarios.

Weekly state pension	April 2023	April 2024 if it rises with...
		6.7% rise in prices measured by CPI	7.8% rise in wages, excluding bonuses	8.5% rise in total wages
Basic pension (claimed before April 2016)	£156.20	£166.66	£168.40	£169.50
New pension (claimed from April 2016)	£203.85	£217.50	£219.75	£221.20

RT MONEY PARTNER

UNLOCK YOUR RETIREMENT DREAMS

Give your retirement years a boost with equity release

Equity release allows homeowners aged 55 and over to access the money tied up in their homes to help them live their retirement to the fullest. Whether it's for travel or a big purchase like a campervan, you may be able to unlock from £10,000 up to 55% of your home's value as tax-free cash. Plus, with a lifetime mortgage you continue to own 100% of your property and some plans require no monthly repayments.

It's important to make sure equity release is right for you and advice is required before proceeding with equity release. This is why Radio Times has partnered with Age Partnership+, whose team will explore your options and tell you all you need to know, including whether your entitlement to means-tested benefits could be affected now or in the future. With a no-obligation personalised illustration they will help you understand the features and risks and explain that equity release may involve a lifetime mortgage, which is secured against your property, or a home reversion plan.

Equity release requires paying off any existing mortgage, and any money released, plus accrued interest would be repaid upon death or moving into long-term care. Equity release will reduce the value of your estate and impact funding long-term care. Only if your case completes would an advice fee of £1,995 be payable. Other lender and solicitor fees may apply.

Find out more with your FREE Radio Times guide to equity release written by RT's Paul Lewis.

Susie Dent

Word of the week double whammy

A double whammy is seldom good – fitting, given the origin of the term, which has always been about hexes and curses. "Whammy" is first recorded in the 1940s as an extension of "wham", the sound of a forceful impact. The word was greatly popularised by Al Capp's 1950s cartoon strip Li'l Abner, in which a character called Evil Eye Fleegle could curse a victim with a "single" whammy by pointing a finger with one eye open; the double kind kept both evil eyes open. As Fleegle explains in the strip: "There is th' 'single whammy'! That, friend, is th' full, pure power o' one o' my evil eyes! It's dynamite, friend, an' I do not t'row it around lightly! And, lastly – th' 'double whammy' – namely, th' full power o' both eyes – which I hopes I never hafta use".

EDITED BY JANE HILL

SHETLAND STRIFE

What has happened to Shetland (1 November BBC1)? I watched, after much anticipation, the first episode of the return of this well-liked series, but the acting felt corny. Popular, well-known actors seemed to have lost their touch. The show's writers seemed to try to make up for this by more foul language in a single episode than I recall in all the previous series put together.

I would plead for someone to address these issues, but am probably already much too late. Oh, what have they done?

Peter Griggs Leicester

...I am so disappointed in the new Shetland. This is a drama I always enjoyed. I was looking forward to Ashley Jensen taking over, but was there any need for all the violence and swearing? If this is a sample of what the rest of the series is going to be like, I won't bother watching.

Margaret Anderson

Horncastle, Lincolnshire

...Whatever happened to continuity? In the first episode of Shetland, when DI Calder is talking to her brother in the church, the knot in her scarf goes up and down like a yo-yo!

And when Ellen jumps off the cliff she's wearing black and white trainers, yet when she next appears, still dripping wet, her boots are plain black and completely different – only for the original black and white footwear to reappear on her corpse. Don't the programme-makers care about this and realise how annoying it is?

YOUTUBE GEM

We've been hooked watching 8 out of 10 Bats (YouTube).

By cancelling Autumnwatch, the BBC encouraged Chris Packham and Megan McCubbin to give voice to so many young naturalists, whose enthusiasm and clarity in presentation put many seasoned presenters to shame. Another plus: there's no music

NICE WORK, GREAT ACTOR

I was sad to hear that Haydn Gwynne had died recently, aged 66. Most viewers will have seen her in Drop the Dead Donkey (1990). But I most remember her playing the academic Dr

Robyn Penrose in the BBC2 adaptation of David Lodge's novel Nice Work in 1989.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

All sorcery and no science

I recall the excited conversations I had, aged eight, during the first series of Doctor Who. I don't mind whether this alien with two hearts is played by a woman or a man; I'm not bothered by ethnicity or sexuality. What I do mind is that, 60 years on, the Doctor has become less of a scientist and more of a magician. In recent years I've been reminded of Harry Potter as the Doctor resolves yet another confusing storyline by waving the sonic screwdriver.

Please can we get the series back to its roots: tense human dramas where ingenuity (and cod science) saves the day. Leave the megadeaths of whole star systems to Hollywood.

A SHAMEFUL REMINDER

Hidden in the schedules was probably one of the most important TV programmes this year. Channel 4's Britain's Human Zoos (RT Viewpoint, 28 October) explored how, as late as 1958, Britain and Europe still had exhibitions or "human zoos" that enabled the population to gawk at colonised people in shows and spectacles.

Camera footage from the time shockingly showed a perplexed black child on display in a make-believe African village, surrounded by paying onlookers. Elsewhere, a small group of Bambuti (pygmy) people were displaced from their homes and migrated to Edwardian England as music hall curiosities.

Watching this excellent documentary by novelist Nadifa

ALL THE GLOBE'S A STAGE

Thanks to BBC4 for showing the 2012 Globe Theatre production of Henry V (22 October). It reminded us of the many happy days we spent as groundlings watching authentic Shakespeare plays, with actors in period costume. It's an example of the quality productions the Globe used to perform before they became more and more politically correct.

Perhaps the BBC could show Twelfth Night, also from the 2012 season, which we have seen described as "perhaps the finest live performance of a Shakespeare play ever recorded". And "Five or so curtain calls and a standing ovation. Stephen Fry danced. Isn't The Globe bloody fantastic?"

COURAGE UNDER FIRE

I know Lyse Doucet is chief international correspondent and she is only doing her job when she reports on conflict around the world, but may I say how well she does it? For years she has been a fixture in the horror stories that have evolved in Syria, Afghanistan, Ukraine and now Israel and Gaza. She is sympathetic, compassionate and her empathy with victims of war shines through every report.

She never seems to be off the screen, though. Keep safe, Lyse.

TAKE A CHANCE ON LEAH

Mamma Mia! I Have a Dream (Sunday ITV1) is the same old, same old: a competition to find a Sophie and a Sky for a West End musical. Except... not so same old. Among the girls is Leah Rutherford, plus size, a bit lacking in self-confidence, but with the most beautiful voice, good acting ability and she's a team player. Sophie as a rock chick? You bet!

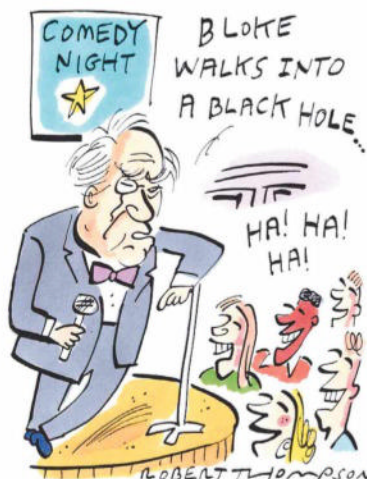

Let's hope the judges and casting crew have the courage and foresight to recognise that the world needs the Leahs to be in the West End. It's talent that matters so much more than fitting our preconception of what a star looks like.

Come on, Leah, dare to dream!

MOORE THE MERRIER

The article on Dr Maggie Aderin-Pocock (RT, 4 November) says, "It's difficult to picture her predecessor Patrick Moore joshing with the likes of Lee Mack." In 1998, as a guest on Have I Got News for You, he accompanied the closing theme tune on the xylophone. And he appeared on Morecambe and Wise and Just a Minute. He was quite capable of poking fun at himself, and was very funny!"

IMPROVING ON A WINNER

Celebrity Race across the World (BBC1) again made compelling viewing. I loved getting to know each pair and especially admired the fortitude of Billy Monger and his sister Bonny – it was so sad that they had to pull out, but as they said, quite rightly, family comes first. I hope all goes well for them.

A couple of years ago another couple had to pull out because they had their money stolen, which I think proves that four couples were not enough this time – there need to be five or six. I hope planners are already thinking about next year's Race – I've watched them all and absolutely love them!

IN PERSONS

TV director Alan Boyd claimed on Mike Yarwood: Thank You for the Laughs (21 October Channel 5) that he had "invented" (his word) the split screen technique for showing the same person on the screen apparently talking to himself. Benny Hill had done this many years earlier on TV, and Buster

THE SPICE OF LIFE

Radio 2 should be congratulated for giving Paul Gambaccini a two-hour slot on Sunday evenings. Listening to the first Paul Gambaccini Collection (29 October) brought a smile to my face.

Not many DJs would follow the jazz organist Jimmy Smith's version of Walk on the Wild Side with a country music classic "weezy" by George Jones and then follow that with a Diana Ross track. That sort of sequence might be a bit too adventurous for some popular music broadcasters, but because of the way Gambaccini puts together his show, it works.

Such variety in the tracks played, coupled with his anecdotes and knowledge about the music, makes for a very entertaining show and really freshens up Radio 2 on a Sunday evening.

'I'd love to have my own TV show!'

As tension rises in the Bake Off tent, we asked Giuseppe Dell'Anno how winning in 2021 has changed his life. "I'm still incredulous," he tells RT. "Often, early, when I'm half-awake, I think it's been a dream. I applied on a whim – I was 45 and happy with my career in engineering. Less than a week after filming ended, I was on a plane to Milan to start a new job. My plan was to move the whole family – I'd bought a car, rented a flat and subscribed to the gym for a whole year... but less than a month after the final aired, I got the offer to write my first book. And in three days, I moved back to the UK. I sold the car but lost the gym membership!"

What's his favourite memory of Bake Off? "The first signature bake, when Paul and Prue came to my bench to taste my mini rolls. I was looking into the eyes of baking royalty!"

"I've been a big fan of the show ever since the Mary Berry days. I'd find myself shouting at the TV. If you bake a cake or two at home, it's almost like football fans watching a game – they become the best coach on earth!

"The selection process was during lockdown. I had to film a 60-second video clip, then there were phone and Zoom calls, but the final audition was live. They had moved the Bake Off benches into the main hall of a hotel. We were invited to bring a

I do hope a previous non-dancer goes on to win – as that is what the show originally set out to do.

JO BRAND

The comedian can't bake a cake, but she eats hecklers for breakfast

What's the view from your sofa?

This is probably going to be the most boring answer you've ever had – from my sofa I can see a big window, through which I can see a tree. Woohoo! Some people have a TV that covers half their wall, I don't.

Who controls your tiny telly's remote?

We are very democratic. I have my husband [psychiatric nurse, Bernie Bourke] here – obviously – he's not left me yet. I don't know why... He watches a lot of sport, very committedly, like men do. My daughter, who's 20, watches Made in Chelsea with me – although I like it more than she does.

What have you been enjoying watching recently?

I hesitate to use the word enjoying, but I have just watched The Reckoning with Steve Coogan. I thought the actors were fantastic. As someone who is quite old and remembers Jimmy Savile, he [Coogan] has every mannerism and the voice down perfectly. Having said all that, it made me feel really depressed afterwards. It's almost pointless to say, but it was very shocking that so many people seemed to know what was going on, and yet Savile somehow managed to cling on to his position of fame and security at the top.

Unfortunately, people in positions of power often seem to abuse them. Do you think the world is changing?

I think things have changed beyond recognition. Sadly, when I was younger, I worked in some terrible places. The low-level disrespect for women was appalling. If you didn't join in and laugh it off, you were all manner of frigid or old. In those days I think women were conditioned to think that behaviour was acceptable. I did make complaints, but it never got me anywhere.

You worked as a psychiatric nurse for ten years – did that help you retain a sense of perspective when your comedy career took off?

It was an eye-opener – being a nurse in a hospital with a community that was really struggling. Some people's lives are awful. It has, hopefully, made me into a person who treats others with respect. It also helped me keep my feet on the ground once I started to get recognised and people would fuss around me.

And did it harden you to hecklers?

It certainly did. We would have a lot of people who were either very drunk or in a terrible mess and they weren't always very polite, shall we say! People often came in looking for tranquillisers – because I was in charge, I'd be wheeled out to say no. They'd let rip and I would just have to stand there and be nice. So, to be perfectly honest, when I started doing stand-up, I thought the heckling was terribly unimaginative...

Do you watch panel shows? Sara Pascoe told RT that Mock the Week's theme tune gave her palpitations after she appeared on it...

Wow! I wasn't a big fan of being on

SNACK AND DRINK

Still water and fruit... Ha! I don't like sweet things, I like crisps with weird flavours

Mock the Week in the olden days. There was a lot of jostling for position, which I didn't like. And you were very often the only woman on it, as well. But I never watch myself on panel shows because I think I'm st.

You've said that you never had a career plan. Were you surprised when you were asked to present The Great British Bake Off: An Extra Slice?

The only career plan that I ever had was a) lower your expectations and b) say yes to things you like the sound of, and no if you don't. I never expected to [get this gig] but that's mainly because I can't bake to save my life. I did watch Bake Off but never had a clue what anyone was talking about or how good the bakers actually were. I would always think, "Oh, that looks nice" and then Paul or Prue would say, "God, what an awful mess." I don't care what stuff looks like as long as it tastes all right!
